

There's No Season

There's no definite season for produce as there used to be. A few years ago, when the local growing season was over, fresh produce disappeared from grocer's counters, but today you can always find the very freshest green vegetables and fruits in our displays. We buy all of our produce locally, whenever possible, but during the non-producing season, we have green vegetables and fruits rushed to us from outside markets by refrigerated trucks. Through this swift service you are assured of having the freshest produce to serve your family.
