

Lewis, Mine Owners Said Nearer Agreement

while the pits were under federal control. The seizure question was brought in casually during a session of a Senate judiciary committee where William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, was the witness.

Green told the senators he feels sure the miners would go back to work if the government seized the coal pits. He added that he is "not sure" the time for seizing has arrived, but that he had read in the newspapers that "the situation is critical in some places."

Green was before the committee to oppose a bill that would make labor unions subject to the anti-trust laws. Lewis Spurns Concessions cessions totaling 80 cents per day per man. Lewis was known to be holding out for more than that. His basic demands, granted by nearly 2,000 smaller companies mining 45,000,000 tons of coal, are for a 95-cent daily pay increase above the present scale of $14.05 and a 15-cent boost in the welfare fund royalty on each ton of coal, now 20 cents a ton.

If Lewis succeeds in obtaining a new agreement with his hoped-for pay and welfare fund gains he would be making an important contract stride for the miners. However, the National Coal association, representing employers, estimates that the average soft coal miner lost about $1,200 in pay last year because of strikes and the three-day work week imposed by Lewis.

Lewis has said that the coal companies which agreed to his new contract have added on 23 1/2 cents to the cost of their ton of coal. The major operators, with whom he is bargaining under court order, insisted it would amount to much more than that. They say they would agree to continue the old con-chairman, McMahon has advocated that the United States undertake a $50,000,000 program of foreign aid, including benefits to Russia, as a bold effort to obtain an early international agreement for control of atomic energy. Durham specified that he was expressing a personal opinion. Nevertheless, he said closely parallels the known opinion held by top State department officials and possibly by Mr. Truman himself. This view is that there is no prospect now that Russia and the Western powers could agree on a system of armament controls and international inspection of atomic plants, including H-bomb factories. They therefore are convinced that a conference would result in failure and that this might increase the dangers of war in the world by building up a sense of despair and hopelessness among people everywhere.

Atomic Peace Parley Idea is Frowned On

Opposite View Expressed
The idea that the chances for agreement at this time are almost non-existent was challenged yesterday by a former official of the American embassy in Moscow. Brig. Gen. Russell E. Randall, retired air force officer who was an attaché in Moscow from September, 1948 to July, 1949, said he believes the chances for an understanding with the Russians now are getting better than they have ever been since the cold war started.

Randall declared that the H-bomb is a force which the Russians "can recognize and fear" because of its devastating possibilities. He urged that the United States take the initiative in calling a peace conference to be held in Moscow with Britain and Russia and possibly other nations.

FEPC Bill Survives But Without Teeth

southern civil rights opponents had filibustered relentlessly against an anti-job discrimination measure with enforcement teeth, backed by President Truman's forces.

The House was ready for the final vote at 3:20 a. m. when a technically forced it to quit, putting off the showdown until sometime after noon.

Supporters of the administration bill found little to their liking in the substitute measure bearing the name of Rep. McConnell (R-Pa.)

Southern Democrats who don't want any kind of FEPC measure indicated they would vote to recommit the McConnell bill. They expected strong Republican support—and maybe some northern Democratic support, as well.

The bill would create a five-member federal commission to cooperate with state and local agencies in voluntarily curbing job discrimination against negroes or other minorities. The commission would have power to investigate and recommend—but it couldn't issue cease and desist orders and get them enforced through federal court injunctions, as under the administration bill.

The Dixie members had tried since noon Tuesday to block House action on any kind of bill. They forced repeated time-consuming roll call votes and tried several times to force adjournment.

But administration Democrats and a sizable group of Republicans, taking note of their political platform promises, made clear they were willing to sit it out all night and again today if necessary to wear down the southerners.

As it finally emerged, the McConnell substitute in effect declares that Congress doesn't approve of discrimination in employment but won't do anything harsh to prevent it.

The bill says it is the policy of the United States to eliminate discrimination in employment opportunities because of race, creed or color. The House added physical disabilities, and political affiliations to this listing, and tossed in a provision that employment of any member of the so-called minority groups shall create a presumption of lack of discrimination. It also voted to deny any protection of the bill to Communists or persons belonging to Communist fronts.

Other amendments would relieve an employer from the necessity of hiring a minority group worker who couldn't prove his qualifications; discourage job discrimination because of sex, and exempt the Atomic Energy commission and its contractors from the bill's provisions.

Violence Continues
State police and roving pickets, meanwhile played a grim game of "hide-and-go-seek" today while non-union miners carried guns to enforce their right to work during the soft coal strike.

Western Pennsylvania's ice-coated highways were patrolled by state policemen on the alert for new outbreaks such as occurred sporadically yesterday.

Peace officers in other soft coal-producing states, including West Virginia, also feared new violence. Three diggers were beaten yesterday at a strip (surface) mine near Clearfield, Pa. The men who inflicted the beatings promised to return in full strength today.

A 200-man caravan also struck two mines near Pittsburgh and five truck drivers were forced to dump their loads of coal.

Sledge hammers were used to wreck coal mine equipment at two strip mines near Ligonier, Pa., and coal was dumped at a big loading platform near Murfreesville, Pa. Many non-union miners continued to day to carry shotguns, revolvers and tear gas bombs for protection as they worked despite the current strike of the United Mine Workers.
