

CORVALLIS, March 3 — (CP) — Oregon state college's basketball team played before more home-town rosters this year than ever before, athletic director Roy (Spec) Keene said yesterday.

The 14-game home season drew 87,463 fans. It was attributable largely to the new 10,200-seat gill coliseum which replaced a 3,500 capacity court.

Major Provisions Of City Building Code Given In Detail By Inspector C. H. Boniols

City Inspector C. H. Boniols, in answer to many questions being asked about the building code and permits for new construction, has prepared a statement covering most of the important phases of the city ordinance.

Permits are required, he said, for all new buildings, additions and repairs costing $20 or more. In all cases, if changes are to be made to structural parts of a building, such as removing partitions, enlarging windows and doors or disturbing any of the outside walls, permits are required. They are also required for all plumbing and electrical wiring, whether the work is done by a contractor or the owner.

When work for which a permit is required is started or proceeded with prior to obtaining a permit, the fees shall be doubled. To obtain a permit the applicant shall first file an application in writing on a form furnished by the city for that purpose. He is to describe the land by block, lot, tract and street address, show the use of all parts of a building, state the valuation of the proposed work, and give such other information as reasonably may be required by the building inspector.

In regard to location of buildings on the lot, all new buildings shall be 15 feet from the street, four feet from the side of the property line, and 10 feet from the rear property line. Garages being built on the rear of a lot may be on the property line if there is a one-hour fire resistant wall on the side of adjacent property, if no windows are placed on the adjacent side, and if the garage is not more than 400 square feet. All buildings shall be on continuous cement foundations, with 18 inches clearance between the bottom joist and surface, or ground beneath, and with a cross ventilation. Headers for doors and windows shall be on edge. Firestops shall be provided and angle bracing must be installed.

If more than 50 percent of the value of an existing building is repaired or altered in a 12-month period, the building shall be made to conform to the requirements of a new building. If 25 to 50 percent of value is repaired in a 12-month period, only the new additions shall conform to the new building requirements. If less than 25 percent of the new part, it must conform with new building requirements, but may be built of the same material of which the old building is constructed.

Chimney Rule Important
All buildings using oil, wood or solid fuel of any kind must have an approved chimney, constructed of masonry, with a flue liner of clay or terracotta, and must extend from the ground to six inches above the peak of the roof. Where gas is used, vents shall be constructed of unglazed clay tile of not less than one-half inch in thickness. Connections of such pipes shall be by sleeves or flanges, well cemented.

81 clubs and their guests recently.

The explanation of the otherwise mysterious number designation of the groups is that members elected to Congress for the first time generally band together in an organization which meets for dinner occasionally. The groups take as their names, the numbers of the Congresses in which they came in as new members. These are essentially social groups but serve a very useful purpose in getting members better acquainted with one another. It is customary to have speakers of outstanding importance at these dinner meetings, with questions on an "off the record" basis following the speech. I have found attendance at 78-club meetings to be very beneficial to my work as a congressman.

Apparently what big-government addicts seem to consider a minor item of $90,000,000 has been misplaced by the Commodity Credit Corporation. It was publicly stated recently by General Accounting Office officials that the CCC is not actually "short" some $366,000,000 (more than a third of a billion) as intimated by Senator Williams of Delaware last year. No, it turns out that only $90,000,000 was written off by CCC as "interdepartmental bookkeeping!"

Congress Chat

HARRIS ELLSWORTH, M. C.
Fourth District, Oregon

There is a publication issued daily during each session of Congress and sent to each House member. It is known as the Calendar of the House of Representatives. It lists the bills reported by committees and tells the history and status of each. The back page of the Calendar each day reports the "Status of Major Bills—Second Session." Up to now it is a blank page — with one minor exception. The House did on February 9th pass an urgent deficiency appropriation bill. Otherwise no major bills have been reported and no major bills have been acted upon by the House — with the session nearly one-third gone. The other evening I heard the President refer to the 80th (Republican controlled) Congress as a do-nothing Congress. So long as his own 81st Congress has such an amazingly poor record—literally no record at all as compared with the constructive record of the 80th—I should think he would talk about something else.

Thanks to the generosity of H. B. Murphy of the Pinnacle Packing company of Medford, many members of the House of Representatives now know of the surpassing excellence of Rogue River Valley pears. Du Comité pears were distributed to members attending a dinner combining the 78, 79, 80 and

Civilian Voice Bomb Warfare Planning Urged

WASHINGTON, March 3. — (CP) A congressional committee demands that the United States review its plans for waging aerial atomic warfare, especially against big cities.

The House Armed Services committee said the review must be made by the nation's top civilian leadership—not the military high command.

In a blistering 30,000-word report on its hearings last fall into the so-called "admiral's revolt" against unification policies, the committee: 1. Noted testimony by Gen. Omar Bradley that he and the other members of the joint chiefs of staff "in the absence of any guides from their civilian supervisors" have had to "assume" what this country's national objectives are.

2. Declared that if this is so "then assuredly the secretary of defense should initiate action in the National Security Council to obtain a firm statement of principles upon which the joint chiefs of staff may rely."

The National Security Council is composed of the President, vice-president, secretaries of state and defense and the head of the National Security Resources Board.

The committee reviewed Navy contentions that present military strategy calls for immediate retaliatory bombing of enemy cities in event of an attack on the United States.

"The issue... is assuredly not academic," the report said. "Neither is the decision one which should be haphazardly reached or left solely to military leaders to resolve."
