men. He hid in a mountain cabin during the day, shaved off a three-months growth of beard, then set out only to walk into a patrol of several officers. He did not resist arrest.

Sheriff Swartz recounted the events leading to the shooting this way: Thompson and his 17-year-old wife, Mary Ann, were quarreling at the party. They had been drinking. Sometime early yesterday, Thompson left and returned with a 22 rifle. He was persuaded to leave. Later, Looney and Mrs. Thompson stepped outside on the porch and bullets were fired in their direction. Looney then called police.

Chief Dubell went to Thompson's home and the young man grabbed for Dubell's drawn pistol. After the shots were fired, Looney said he saw Thompson run from the house and into the woods. The time of the police chief's death was set at about 3 a. m. He died en route to a Eugene hospital in a car driven by the community's other policeman.

Looney had arrived at Thompson's house as the latter fled. He quoted Thompson as saying, "that's it, Herb" and dashed away. Another neighbor, Mrs. Clifford Cruson, witnessed the shooting from a window of her home. Thompson was employed by the Pope and Talbot Lumber company on the green chain gang at the mill here. State police said he has a police record of assault convictions in Portland and Butte, Mont. Dubell was sworn in as police chief here in December. He formerly was police chief at Sutherlin, where his widow resides. He was a member of the Oakridge Masonic lodge and the Northwest Police Officers association.

Atlanta Daily Newspapers Tell Of Merger Plan

ATLANTA, March 20.—(AP)—The Atlanta Journal and the Atlanta Constitution Saturday announced an agreement had been reached for a merger of the two papers.

The announcement was made in front page statements published in both papers.

"Economic reasons have played a large part in dictating this move on our part," the statement said. It gave no financial details of the merger.

The Journal, an afternoon and Sunday paper, has the largest circulation in the South. The Constitution, a morning and Sunday paper, has the next largest circulation. They are the only dailies of general circulation in Atlanta.

The announcement was made by Clark Howell, president and publisher of the Constitution Publishing company, and James M. Cox, chairman of the board of the Atlanta Journal company.

"Rumors persist that the two Atlanta newspapers are going to be merged," the statement said. "We think the people are entitled to know the facts."

"It is true that we have reached an agreement toward merging the Constitution and the Journal. This agreement is subject to the approval of certain government agencies. It is assumed this approval will be forthcoming without undue delay."

The Journal has a daily circulation of 245,035 and Sunday circulation of 307,507. The Constitution's daily circulation is 180,948 and Sunday circulation 216,956.

The statement said the effect of the merger would be that the Constitution would continue in the morning field and the Journal in the afternoon field, with a combined Sunday edition.

The editorial policies will remain independent. Howell will continue as president and publisher of the Constitution, and the Journal will remain under the guidance of Cox.

Both newspapers will continue to publish and transact all business in their present plants.

END OF MILL VILLAGES CHAPEL HILL, N. C.—(AP)—A deep-rooted tradition of the South—the cotton mill village—is disintegrating. Southern cotton mills, which for years have rented scores of village homes, are selling the dwellings to workers.

The break-up of this mill-worker relationship, often termed "feudalistic" by its many critics, is described in a book recently published by the University of North Carolina Press. Harriet L. Herring of the university is the author.

Pride in home ownership and individuality are quickly reflected, the author says. She notes: "Some of the people paint their houses soon after purchasing them even if this is not particularly necessary, using a different color from the neighbors and often putting a trimming in bright contrasting colors."

Thousands See Flying Objects In New Mexico

FARMINGTON, N. M., March 20.—(AP)—Folks hereabouts agreed they saw something in the sky at noon Friday, but nobody seemed to know what.

All of the 250 persons interviewed by Walt Rogal, editor of the Farmington Times, admitted seeing what was generally described as a mass flight of flying objects.

They were skeptical as to what the objects were. Some thought a new secret weapon; some flying saucers; and at least one—pieces of cotton.

Rogal estimated 85 percent of this town's population of 6,100 saw the objects.

Most folks who would talk about it thought the things were about 15,000 feet high. They told of watching them hover over the town for about 20 minutes, then speed away to the northeast.

Harold F. Thatcher, 43, head of the Farmington unit of the soil conservation service, said he made a triangulation on one of the objects. He said it showed they were about 20,000 feet up and traveling 1,000 miles an hour or more. He thought the object was "at least the size of a B-36, maybe larger."

State Patrolman Andy Andrews provoked argument by stating he watched three of the objects land on the roof of a Farmington garage and that they turned out to be pieces of cotton.

No explanation could be offered by Kirtland air force base, the Civil Aeronautics authority nor Los Alamos atomic laboratory officials.

Editor George Bowra of the Attec Independent said he viewed the objects through a power glass from Attec. He said what was seen is a star or planet about two hours ahead of the sun. He said cloud movement gave the impression of great speed.

A number of valley residents attended the operetta Pinafore presented at the senior high school auditorium in Roseburg Friday evening.
