Adventists Enter Fund-Raising Day

Members of the Roseburg Seventh-day Adventist church will participate in the denomination's one-day drive, Saturday, March 25, to raise funds from its Sabbath school to complete a $400,000 60-bed hospital in Pakistan, Ray Clendenon, Sabbath school superintendent, announced.

The hospital, located in Karachi, the capital city, is nearly completed and doctors and nurses trained in American Adventist medical schools are now making preparations to go to the hospital as medical missionaries, the superintendent said. Adventist leaders are hoping for $40,000 from this offering, part of which will be set aside to help start a publishing house at Chuharkana, Pakistan.

Every three months Adventist Sabbath schools raise more than $1,000,000 to carry on their established mission program in 228 of the 262 countries of the world, the superintendent reports. Once each quarter an offering is taken for special projects. Chapels, churches, hospitals, dispensaries, and many other building projects have been established throughout the world by these special offerings.

These Sabbath school offerings are but a small part of the denomination's total offerings to missions. Figures for 1949 are not yet available but the total offerings during 1948 were $31,954,852 or $135.70 per capita including children as well as aged people. Since the organization of the Seventh-day Adventist church in 1863 to the close of 1948, its members have given a total of $533,071,470.
