Has Lead In Play

Caroline L. Haskins

Of much interest here is the praise being credited by newspapers in Helena, Mont., to Miss Caroline L. Haskins, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John L. Haskins, of Roseburg, for her superb portrayal of the leading role in the play, "Medea." The play was recently presented by the Helena Theatre Guild.

The role played by Miss Haskins is that of a vengeful, abandoned wife and is reported to be one of the most difficult ever written, with intense action and long speeches fraught with meaning and subtlety.

Miss Haskins is Occupational Therapist at the Veterans hospital in Helena. She is well-known in Roseburg, having frequently visited at the home of her parents at the Veterans hospital post. Dr. Haskins is manager of the Veterans hospital in Roseburg. Miss Haskins visited here for several days a week ago.

WHEN GRANDMA WAS A GIRL

Grandma's diamond sparkles just as brightly today as it did that beautiful spring day when he gave it to her. Because a diamond surpasses all gems in brilliance—because it is the hardest and one of the most durable gems, it is a fitting symbol of the engagement, for it will remain unchanged in beauty through the years.

If granddad bought his diamond from us, as many old-time Douglas County residents have, he did so because he knew that our business ethics were above reproach—that we gave sound counsel.

In this respect, we're still old-fashioned. We steer clear of deceptive promotions and misleading advertising. We give our customers today the same sound advice in buying their diamond as we gave granddad.

We have gone modern in several respects, however. We have the finest and most modern of gem instruments. We have followed closely the advances in new knowledge of our trade. All these modern aids and new knowledge help us to offer you still better service than we gave to grandpa.
