Milk Price War Threat Again Confronts Trade

pound for butterfat and $1.90 per cwt. for fluid milk—an over all price of $5.50 per cwt. for milk produced by the farmers and delivered to local distributing plants. Farmers are now receiving, on a temporary basis, $5.96 per cwt. a price they term as "fair."

"No Consumer Resistance"
Farmers cite as reasons for wanting the higher price the increased expenses they have felt within the last few months. These include a rise in feed costs, increased rail rates and a hard winter which necessitated the trucking in of hay and feed for the cows.

It is the farmers' contention, according to the milk association board of directors, that there is no present need to lower per quart milk prices to the consumers, since there is no "consumer resistance to present prices."

Marvin Mayo, business representative for the local Teamsters union, expressed the hope that the farmers' request for peaceful negotiation may be realized.

However, Mayo said, "The teamsters will respect any picket lines placed at the plants of distributors involved. Our contracts with these distributors state that our men do not have to cross any bona fide AF of L picket lines."

The producers association recently became affiliated with the Roseburg Central Labor Council of the AF of L.

Today's developments resulted from a meeting of the Umpqua Valley Milk Producers association held Thursday morning at which farmers discussed the contemplated price cut for farmers, effective May 1.

Spokesmen for the producers association included Carl Binder, president; Al Hooten, secretary-treasurer; and trustees Paul Newman, Peter Pon and Al Greer.

Student Outburst Quickly Adjusted By Faculty Action

Roseburg senior high school students today heard an explanation of the action taken by Principal George Erickson following a picture-taking incident which nearly precipitated a mass walkout yesterday.

Today's meeting was held in an orderly fashion and saw no demonstration of the high feeling noted among students yesterday. Student Body President Durward Boyles said the student council "backed up" Erickson's handling of the incident and that the matter was now considered closed.

Today's assembly followed a student outburst Thursday noon, during which an impromptu assembly was staged during the noon hour, to discuss the matter.

Senior high school administrators and students spokesmen, gave the following story:

Fearful of embarrassment which might result from possible distribution of these pictures, some senior girls reportedly photographed, after school hours, one of the sophomore photographers. This second series of pictures was taken off school property and in such a situation "as to cause extreme embarrassment" to the subject, according to Erickson.

During the investigation which followed, the school administration determined, Erickson said, that the first pictures were taken on school property during school hours and that the administration was legally in charge of any punitive measures to be taken.

The second group of pictures, taken by the senior girls, was not taken while the school administration had control of the students involved.

Suspensions Follow
The sophomores were suspended for a day and a half, with instructions to return Monday with their parents. Since the school had no legal control over the actions of the senior girls, they were merely called in to Erickson's office and "lectured severely."

The student body created an impromptu assembly during the Thursday noon hour to discuss a claim of "unfairness" of the administration's actions. A committee then met with the principal and Boyles, for further discussion.

Superintendent of Schools Paul S. Elliott suggested a poll of the student council be taken to determine if the administration's action was deemed the best solution. At that time, the council upheld the administration and suggested that an explanation be given the students during the regularly-scheduled student body nominating assembly held this morning.

Erickson said yesterday the original pictures, taken by the sophomores, were not clear enough to reproduce satisfactorily and expressed the belief they were not taken maliciously, but indicated the students were only "irresponsible."

He said all efforts have been made to recover both sets of pictures and that as far as can be determined, all of the pictures have been accounted for.

Stigma Hinders Mental Cases, Dr. Price States

Mental illness is our number one health problem. The cost of delay in treating the mentally ill is great. Emotional problems can be prevented by early diagnosis and treatment. The principal obstacle to recognizing mental problems is the stigma attached to the condition. Clinics can be established and maintained for early diagnosis and treatment far more economically than patients can be cared for in hospitals.

These were the important points stressed in a talk by Dr. Frankampton Price, chief psychologist at the Veterans' hospital, speaking before the Roseburg Lions club Thursday night in the Hotel Umpqua. Dr. R. Sinclair, psychologist at the hospital, spoke also on the subject of mental health at a meeting of the Lady Elks the same night.

The talks were part of a series being conducted during Mental Health week to emphasize the importance of mental illness and to attempt to break down the stigma usually associated with persons so afflicted.

After outlining the importance of the issue and quoting figures to show the comparatively small amount spent on mental illnesses with that on other common diseases, Dr. Price discussed clinics. While the establishment of a clinic and its maintenance cost may seem high, it is actually small compared with the cost of treatment in hospitals later, he pointed out.

Early diagnosis may result in an easy cure that is not expensive, and a great amount of suffering for both the patient and family may be eliminated by such clinical care, he said.

Dr. Price said such a clinic was established in Texas and cost $40,000 a year to operate. The federal government under the mental health act will pay $2 for every $1 put up by the community. There would also be a nominal charge to the patients. This would bring the cost down to about $10,000 a year for the community.

Dr. Price also discussed parent-child relationship. A great many cases of mental illness can be traced to broken families, he said.

Appeals In Vain To Save Ex-Wife From Sentence

PARIS, April 28.—(AP)—A dramatic plea by former tennis star Jean Borotra yesterday failed to save his former wife from a 10-year forced labor sentence.

Tried in absentia under the name of Mabel de Forest, she was accused of having been an informer for the German gestapo. Appearing unexpectedly in court, Borotra said he had not seen his former wife since November, 1943, but that she "is not guilty of the odious acts imputed to her."

"Her sensitive nature makes it impossible," he declared, adding that she had not wanted to go to Germany but had been sent there as a forced laborer.

The tennis star's former wife has been ill and is living in a Swiss sanatorium.

Copco Trying To Reduce Siltation In Toketea Work

The California Oregon Power company is endeavoring to reduce the amount of silt entering the North Umpqua river from its construction work in the Toketea falls area.

Ross Newcomb, game department resident biologist, reported an investigation at the Toketea site Thursday and said that the company is installing settling basins and taking other steps to reduce the amount of silt reaching the river.

Members of the investigating party included C. J. Campbell, chief of river basin investigation, James Vaughn, Rock creek hatchery superintendent, and Newcomb, from the state game department; Ted Gerow, engineer from the state sanitary authority and Laverne Miller, Douglas county sanitary engineer, and Kenneth Gilke, president of the Roseburg Rod and Gun club.

The trip to Toketea was undertaken because of the large amount of dirt coming down the river from the construction project, leading to much complaint from anglers.

Cleanup Order Given
It was found, Newcomb said, that high officials of the company had been at the site previous to the party's arrival and had criticized careless handling of soil and had given instructions for a cleanup, which was in progress when the investigators arrived.

"We cannot expect a project of this magnitude to be conducted without some siltation," Newcomb said. "We do expect, however, that siltation shall be kept at a minimum."

Newcomb explained that some of the best spawning water is located only a few miles downstream from the power development site and that excessive siltation can cause serious damage to the gravel beds, insofar as their use for spawning purposes is concerned. A deposit of silt, Newcomb explained, can smother the eggs, laid in nests scooped out from the gravel.
