Conscience-Hit Woman Pays Tax, Saves Money

BELLINGHAM, May 22 — (AP) — A woman's conscience won a five-year battle here.

As a result she appeared at the Whatcom county courthouse and told County Treasurer Orland Ivarson she had "cheated" the county out of $100 in personal property taxes back in 1945.

After checking and estimating the penalty involved, the treasurer informed she actually owed the county $10. She paid it.

Clyde Beatty Circus Dates Roseburg

If you've never sat, weak at the knees and with your heart in your throat while Clyde Beatty cracks a blacksnake whip in the face of a fighting jungle-bred tiger, and some thirty other tigers and lions as they snarl from their pedestals — you don't know what circus thrills are.

And, that is just what happens at each performance of the huge Clyde Beatty circus, coming to Roseburg, Monday, June 5, for afternoon and night performances west on the Garden Valley road.

For fifteen minutes, while Beatty battles the beasts in the steel arena, his life isn't worth a plugged nickel. It is definitely the most hazardous feat ever known to man.

There is no question about the position the fearless Beatty holds for, no other man or women in the rank of wild animal trainers, world ever before dared to enter an arena with thirty-seven wild and ferocious, jungle-bred lions and tigers — the most treacherous beasts known to man.

In addition to Clyde Beatty and his famous display, the big show boasts of many other top-flight attractions. Among them, Harriet Beatty, wife of the famous trainer and her thrilling display featuring an elephant and a tiger, two of the jungle's deadliest enemies: The Great Barton, the most talked of display in circusdom at the present—the man who walks on his forefinger; the Caudillo Sisters, from Old Mexico, celebrated risley artists; The Flying Thrillers, flying-return stars, and Frank Doyle, the suicidal aerialist, and literally scores of other internationally known attractions.

In all, 267 men and women arenic stars and performers go to make up this year's exciting program.

The performances starting at 2:30 and 8 p.m. daily, open with a gorgeously produced processional entitled, "Spangleland On The March," in which masses of people and animals take part.

Teen-Age Convicts Flee In Mass Prison Break

HUTTONSVILLE, W. Va., May 22 — (AP) —An attempted mass break from the West Virginia medium security prison here was foiled by alert guards last night, although four teen-age convicts slipped away.

State police said a "number of others" among some 50 inmates quartered in a dormitory were involved in the escape attempt. They tried to get away through a barred second-story window which they pried open after breaking the glass.

The Huttnsonville prison is used for first offenders and others whom the state believe stand a good chance of rehabilitation. The inmates are employed in general farm work and other vocational trades and are quartered in dormitories, rather than cells.

Girl, 10, Victim Of Bestial Kidnaper

ATLANTA, May 22 — (AP) — A 10-year-old girl was raped by a white man who kidnaped her and a seven-year-old companion while they were walking to Sunday school.

The girls told detectives the man forced them into his "dirty" automobile at the point of a knife. The detectives said a man drove the girls to a rural area 20 miles south of Atlanta and ordered the younger to "get in the back seat and don't look."

He then raped the older girl, drove back to Atlanta and put the children out. They walked home.

The officers said they found evidence of a dirt road to back up the girls' account.

The 10-year-old child was treated for lacerations at a hospital.

Miocene Age Sea Cow's Bones Found In Astoria Earth

ASTORIA — (AP) —Louis Angstrom has dug the ancient skull bones of a miocene age sea cow out of his basement — and the bones are the second ever found on the north American continent.

J. A Shotwell, curator of the University of Oregon museum of natural history, informed Angstrom that only two skulls of the ancient sea beast had been found previously.

One was dug up at Yaquina, near the Oregon coast, and the other came from Japan. Angstrom's find was described by Shotwell as "extremely valuable," from a scientific viewpoint.

The bones were found last September when Angstrom started digging a basement for his Fernhill home.

Actually, the skull pieces, including teeth, are the bones of a remote ancestor of the sea cow, known to scientists as "desmostylus Hesperus", which lived in the Miocene age in remote geological times, the curator said.

The most distinct characteristic of the creature dug out of the basement is the teeth, "made up of a number of vertical columns"; numbering 7 to 15 to a tooth.

The skull was embedded in rock fragments sent by Angstrom to the university laboratory through Walter Johnson, president of the Clatsop county historical society.

Shotwell has informed Angstrom that his workers expect to spend weeks extracting the bones from the rock and putting the skull together.

Russia Prepares For War, Ex-Prisoner Reports

DUESSELDORF, Germany, May 22 — (AP) —A former German army colonel just back from the soviet union said the Russians are conditioning their people for war with the United States.

Not only are the Russians storing food and supplies in great quantities, said Col. Georg Feldmann, but they are carefully schooling the people to hate and distrust the United States.

Col. Feldmann, who was captured in Romania in 1944, said that in the nearly six years he spent in Russian prison camps, he watched the anti-west tempo pick up impetus.

"But from what I saw I do not believe the Russians are prepared to wage a war yet," he said in an interview.

Banned Secret Society Eyed In Student Fracas

EUGENE, May 22 — (AP) —A report that the banned secret society Theta Nu Epsilon, again is active on the university of Oregon campus drew officials notice.

College officials said they would investigate. The student body president submitted a notarized list of students reported to be members of the society, which once wa active in campus political and social life at many schools.

Some students blamed the secret society for the near-riot among students Thursday night.
