There won't be any change in the city's peddlers' ordinance, at least not for the time being. The controversial city law was disposed of in quick order last night, before any one of the 20 or more business men present could speak for or against. Mayor Albert G. Flegel put the issue on the table, Councilman Percy Croft immediately made a motion that no action be taken to repeal the existing ordinance, un-til a new ordinance can be phrased to more adequately deal with the matter. The motion was passed unanimously and the issue was de-clared closed by the mayor. The city manager was authorized to draft plans and specifications for installation of storm severs on Lane street. This project would have to be a general obligation im-provement and approved by the voters before any final action could be taken.
