Darrell Ray To Be Featured At Riddle's Rodeo

Roseburg's contribution to the success of the Riddle Roping club's rodeo July 3-4 will be Darrell Ray, known in rodeo circles as one of the best clowns in the Pacific Northwest.

Accompanied by his mule, the other half of his clown act, Ray will entertain the crowd with his amusing antics and also come to the rescue of cowboys attempting to flee the horns and hooves of rampaging bulls.

Ike Orr, club president, said the club has augmented its stock by purchasing two-year-old Brahmas from Christensen Bros., and they will be used to test the mettle of would-be bull riders competing for approximately $1,400 in prize money. He said a crew is working this week to build the fences higher at Riddle's Townsend park in order to keep the Brahmas and other wild stock confined.

Orr promised plenty of fast action in this year's rodeo, declaring that every effort will be made to run the show off in less than two and a half hours—the mark set last year.

Orr said entries are still coming in from cowboys planning to enter the five main events. He said there will be about 17 contestants entering the bareback and saddle bronc riding events, bull riding, cow milking and calf roping. Other attractions will include a baton race, pony express race, a stake race and a calf scramble for the kids.

Special features of the two-day affair will include selection of a rodeo queen, two street dances, a carnival, float parade and a fireworks display of the night of July 4.
