U. S. Has Biggest Navy, Also Hunter-Killer Fleet To Meet Sub Superiority Of Russians

BY ALEXANDER R. GEORGE

WASHINGTON, (AP)—The United States Navy is still the world's biggest.

Its active fleets comprise 243 combatant ships. They are generally rated superior in strength to those of any other country. Some 450 combatant vessels tied up in the Navy's reserve would boost that power considerably if war should come.

Russia, however, has a larger submarine force—some 250 to 300 according to competent military observers. There are 74 submarines in the U. S. active fleets and 92 in the reserve, a total of 166.

Some of the Russian submarines (but reportedly not a major portion of them) are the new high speed Snorkels. The Snorkels are equipped with breathing tubes which enable them to operate under water a long time.

Russia is also known to have a highly potent defense fleet for use along its own shores. Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, chief of U. S. naval operations, said in a recent speech at the naval academy that Russia "does in truth possess a very powerful navy designed for its own unique geographical situation."

In the same speech Sherman said: "We must remember that in two wars we and our allies have suffered heavy losses from enemy submarines and that much development has taken place in submarines and more can be expected."

Some military experts have said that Soviet emphasis on submarine power is aimed primarily at control of the Mediterranean sea and its shores. With that control Russia could protect the southern flank of a Red army driving west across Europe.

Sherman, however, said submarines might launch guided missiles against U. S. coastal cities. Aircraft Carrier Best Craft

The aircraft carrier has replaced the battleship as the backbone of the American fleet. The U. S. has 11 carriers in the active fleet and 17 in the reserve, not including three of the 27,000-ton Essex class now being modernized.

According to naval sources here, the Russians have no aircraft carriers unless they have recently converted other ships.

A few months ago Sherman said Russia had added new, high-speed, heavily armed cruisers and many destroyers to its fleet. The Russians have three or four old battleships.

"Jane's Fighting Ships," a manual of the world's navies, reported last December that the Russians were building three ultra-modern battleships equipped to fire radio-controlled rockets and aerial torpedoes.

The United States has one modern battleship, the Missouri, in active service. In the reserve are 14 battleships and two battle cruisers.

Sub Threat Met
Admiral Sherman has said that "besides the fast carrier and amphibious task forces you may expect to find in the fleets a third type of task force—the anti-submarine task force—in recognition of the seriousness of the submarine threat."

He said the typical anti-submarine force would include fast carriers in conjunction with surface ships and submarines carrying guided missiles for attacking bases. It would include hunter-killer teams of submarines, surface ships, airplanes and blimps.

The navy reported to Congress recently that it had developed a new "submarine killer" type of submarine, small enough for mass production. Three of these were being built, navy officers said.

In June a senate subcommittee approved a bill authorizing the navy to work on an atomic-powered submarine and other new type vessels—all of them still years off.

Magician's Skill Fails To Baffle Robber

NEW YORK, July 7 (AP)—Even the "Magician's magician of the year" didn't fool a New York burglar.

Milbourne Christopher, who won that title at a Chicago convention of Magicians, left his Manhattan apartment for the weekend.

As he often does, he used one of his props to hide some extra cash. He put $510 in a Chinese confetti bowl that has a secret compartment—originally designed to fool audiences at his magic show.

When he got home, the apartment appeared undisturbed. But someone had solved the secret of the Chinese confetti bowl. The money was gone, he told police yesterday.

'Looker' Vanishes With Guy's Car And Accordion

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP)—Frank L. Lawver, 31, told police he's out of the serenading business. He's also out of one accordion.

Here's his story:

He met a blue-eyed brunet, a looker. He mentioned that he plays an accordion, happened to have his $350 instrument in his car. Get it, she said, and let's go for a ride in the country, where we can hear the music away from all these fireworks.

They got in her car and a few blocks later she pulled up in front of a restaurant. We'd better take along some sandwiches, she suggested, we might get hungry.

Lawver went in to get them. When he returned, blue-eyed brunet, car and accordion had vanished. He filed a grand theft report.
