Marshall Plan's Success In Fighting Communism Told By Geo. Springer At Rotary

A report on the program to return World War II dead and an indication of the success of the Marshall plan were given Rotary club members at their Thursday noon meeting by George Springer, now on leave from army department headquarters in Paris.

Springer, a brother of Eugene Springer of Roseburg, related briefly the thoroughness with which the program to return the war dead was carried out. As chief of operations, Springer said he was able to travel extensively throughout Europe, in addition to many countries behind the "iron curtain," in an effort to locate the 14,000 soldiers listed as missing dead.

He said every mode of conveyance was used in locating and transporting bodies of American soldiers, sailors and airmen—in some cases sleds and horses were used, in others, the program involved such engineering feats as raising ships from the ocean and lakes. All but 2,800 war dead were recovered and many of those remaining in Europe are buried in cemeteries located in lands now under Russian domination, Springer said.

Commenting upon the success of the Marshall plan, Springer spoke of the "grandiose and spectacular Berlin air lift," which he said played a large part in saving that city from destruction through starvation. He said the primary purpose of the Marshall plan is to combat Communism by combating adversity. He said inhabitants of countries who find themselves aided by goods instead of promises soon lose interest in Communism. This he said, is the case in France and Italy where Communism has lost considerable strength, largely because of the success of the Marshall plan.

Springer declared that most of Europe has recovered from World War II to a great extent, with the exception of England and Spain.

Speaking briefly on the recent "fall" of the French government, Springer said that situation appeared to be periodic because of the nature of France's coalition government. He said the falls the French government take should cause no alarm, that the various french ministers and department chiefs are "merely rotating jobs."

The meeting was presided over by Walter S. Mallory, serving his first full meeting as new president of the Roseburg Rotary club.

Detroit Crackdown On Speeders Paying Off

DETROIT, July 7 — (AP) — If figures count for anything, Detroit's crackdown on speeding drivers is paying off.

In 60 days of a "get tough" policy 590 persons have been sent to jail.

Over the same period 23 persons were killed in traffic as compared to 34 for the previous 60 days.

"It looks good to me," said traffic Judge John D. Watts. "But give us another six months and we'll really show some results."
