

Reduced Standards Fixed For Draftees; They Must Have At Least Sixteen Good Teeth

By VERN HAUGLAND

WASHINGTON —(AP)—The army's forthcoming draftees must have better teeth than was required for World War II duty, but they need not be quite so stable emotionally.

And in the event of a war a general reduction in standards for military service is in prospect, so that many men who once might have been rated 4-F may shoulder arms.

Furthermore, plans are underway to see that, in such an emergency, 4-Fs are funneled into suitable essential jobs in which they might be needed.

These were developments as draft boards over the nation began filling the army's demand for 20,000 replacements by Sept. 30. The draftees will take the place of men being sent overseas because of the Korean crisis.

There may be another draft call next month, selective service Director Lewis B. Hershey said yesterday. He added:

"And if things continue to grow worse, it may be necessary to tighten the law concerning exemptions of veterans and the regulations concerning dependents."

Shortage of Dentists Felt
An army spokesman said that men now being drafted must have at least 16 teeth "in proper position" in order to be accepted.

During World War II men were admitted no matter how bad their teeth. The higher qualification, the spokesman said, is due to a shortage of dentists in the army and the inability of the defense department to provide unlimited upper and lower plates.

On the other hand, the army has reduced its standards to admit "mild" neuropsychiatric cases. During the war no known neuropsychiatric cases were admitted.

The spokesman said men afflicted with nervousness or agitation now may be admitted for service in the zone of the interior.

"We found during the war that many men rejected for mild psychoneurosis could have been used satisfactorily," he explained.

The defense department's personnel policy board is classifying 10,000 military jobs to survey those which can be filled by men with defects which in the past ranked them as 4-F.

The navy said it has eased certain strict postwar requirements as to eyesight, color perception and the like, and has returned largely to World War II standards. It has dropped its World War II requirement that a draftee be physically capable of performing any navy duty.

The air force has not changed its requirements. "We never have resorted to the draft and we aren't drafting anyone now," a spokesman said.

Proposed French Ban On Coca Cola Knotty Problem

PARIS. — (AP)—A parliamentary committee has decided it would be a good idea to make Frenchmen quit drinking Coca Cola, but can't figure out how to do it.

Coca Cola is now made in wine-producing France. Hiking the tariff on imports wouldn't affect sales. The health ministry has refused to ban the drink.

The national assembly's committee on beverage has adopted unanimously a resolution introduced by Fernand Chevalier, a moderate deputy from wine-growing Algeria. It asks the government to "take immediately necessary measures with regard to Coca Cola and similar beverages to insure the protection and safeguarding of interests of agriculture, processing industries and the national economy in general."

Just what the committee wants the government to do was not made clear.

Chevalier's resolution was voted instead of a Communist proposal for prohibition of Coca Cola. Previous Communist attempts to ban the beverage also have failed.

however, read a statement saying his previous stand had been misinterpreted.

Discussion of the resolution at previous meetings of the big local had resulted in violent opposition from left wingers, a near riot and the calling of police cars.

Bridges said last night he was opposed to anything which might lead to World War III, and that he favored adjudication of the Korean issues by the United Nations.

The meeting hotly debated a proposal by the Union's walking bosses that Bridges either resign his presidency of the ILWU or his leadership of the left wing maritime federation of the world.

Union sources said that when a voice vote was taken on the resignation demand, President Phil Sandin first announced it had been decided to submit the issue to a referendum in August, after the Bridges group protested the announced result and suggested the latter course.

Stomach Cancer Increasing, Says Medical Teacher

LOS ANGELES, July 21 —(AP)—Cancer of the stomach is increasing in the United States because people are living longer, Dr. Claude E. Welch of Harvard university medical school told a cancer symposium conducted by UCLA.

"Radical surgery is saving more lives and where operations are performed before the disease has involved other organs, over half the victims of stomach cancer are alive at least five years after the surgery," Dr. Welch said.

He said that as many middle aged persons are killed by cancer of the stomach as by traffic accidents.

"There is some reason to suspect that cancer of the stomach is sometimes caused by eating too hot and too irritating foods. Indications are that high incidence of stomach cancer in parts of India result from eating hot and highly spiced curries."

Japanese men have more stomach cancer than their wives, too. Why? Research indicates that it may be due to the fact that the men, who are served first, get their food piping hot while the women get what's left over — and cold.

Harry Bridges' Local Backs U.S. In War In Korea

SAN FRANCISCO — (AP)—Harry Bridges' own local of his CIO International Longshoremen's Union (ILWU) has overwhelmingly passed a resolution endorsing the United States action in Korea.

Neither Bridges nor any representative of his left wing faction offered any opposition. Bridges,
