Giant Two-Stage Rocket Fizzles At Flying Attempt

By JAMES J. STREIBIG
LONG RANGE PROVING GROUND, COCOA, Fla., July 21—(AP)—Experts have begun taking a big V-2 rocket apart to find out why it failed to fly on its first try and to get it ready for a new attempt next Monday.

The 25,000-pound missile sputtered futilely before an audience of less than 100 persons, watching from a safe distance of 7,000 feet on desolate Point Canaveral Wednesday, after nine hours of delay. The V-2, one of a hundred captured from the Germans, was scheduled to be fired like a bullet on an angle designed for maximum range. On the nose of the V-2 was a smaller rocket, known as WAC corporal, which was to launch itself in flight when the V-2 had burned up its ten tons of fuel. This combination is known as a two-stage or step rocket and is one method of extending range. The WAC is too small for war purposes and is intended only for experiments in the problems of super speed, low level flight.

Previous V-2 rocket firings in this country have been straight up for ultra-high altitude studies. Proving ground officials said they could not guarantee a new attempt Monday, but they would make every effort to overhaul the 56-foot combined rocket and get it ready by then. They immediately postponed a second firing of a similar combination scheduled for Wednesday. The double rocket is an army ordnance project known as bumper and is a part of a broad program to develop guided missiles as tactical weapons. Six previous firings were made at White Sands, N. M. One of them set an altitude record of 250 miles.

YANKS CONSOLIDATE ON KUM RIVER—American armored vehicle rumbles down a South Korean road as halftracks and trucks (background) clutter over a bridge to consolidate their position along the south bank of the Kum River. Advancing Communist forces established a 15-mile-long beachhead on the western half of the Kum River defense line, but Americans held doggedly along a 20-mile river front north of Taishan. Linda Darnell, Mate On 'Trial Separation'

HOLLYWOOD.—(AP)—Linda Darnell has moved out of her husband's home, taking their adopted daughter, Lola, two, with her. Her studio said she and film cameraman Peverell Marley have embarked on a "trial separation." They were married in 1943 and separated one studio said. Miss Darnell's studio said she had no immediate plans for divorce.
