

UN Wrangle Prompts Women To Start TV Campaign

TARRYTOWN, N.Y. — (AP) — A group of Tarrytown women have started a campaign to make television sets available to the public so that everybody can see how the Russians act in the United Nations.

Mrs. Neil S. Waterman, wife of a plastics manufacturer and mother of a small son, launched the campaign after she and some friends saw a telecast of a UN security council session with Russia's Jakob Malik tangling with western delegates.

"I was frightened," Mrs. Waterman said. "My friends felt the same way."

"We decided that if enough people could watch, the public would realize the urgency of a concrete effort."

Mrs. Waterman's group hopes the idea will spread to other parts of the country.

Negroes' Use Of Virginia Beach Stirs Town Fuss

COLONIAL BEACH, Va. — (AP) — Residents of this tense resort center braced themselves today for an anticipated showdown this week over the rights of Negroes to swim at normally "white only" beach.

The Negroes, who have filed an anti-discrimination suit against the town charging inadequate bathing beach facilities, postponed a scheduled second swimming party yesterday.

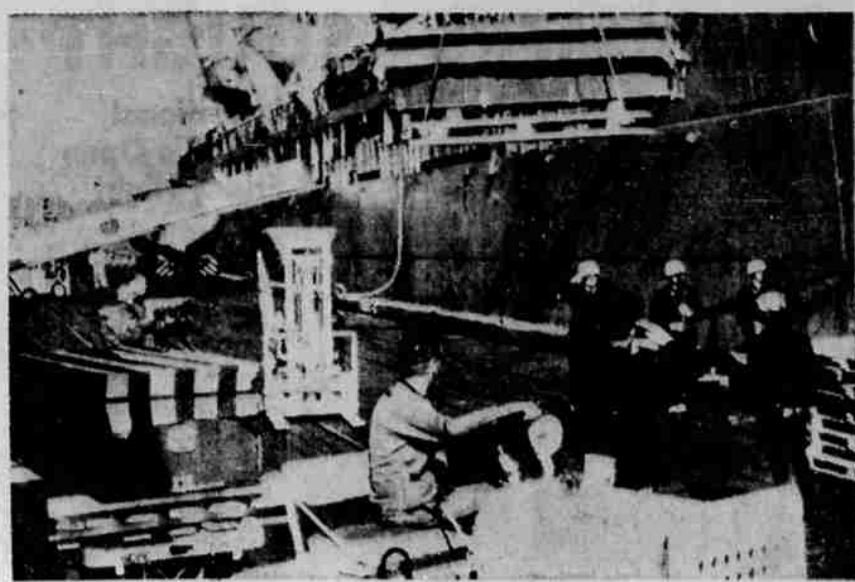

Mayor Norman F. Brewington had told them it might lead to a recurrence of Saturday's outbreak which came near the end of the first of the swimming affairs.

But Negro attorney Martin A. Martin, after advising the Negroes to take the mayor's advice, asserted:

"We will be back—maybe tomorrow, maybe the next day, surely within a week. We will swim at Colonial beach."

Brewington said the town faced two alternatives—providing a place for the Negroes to swim or letting them use the public beach. He said sentiment in the town is against the first proposal.

beach, however, the mayor said he expects "bloodshed." He said "the people around here are all roused up."

A white youth was stabbed, a white newspaperman was roughed up, one Negro was arrested, press cameras were smashed and automobiles were blockaded and stoned in a 30-minute outbreak Saturday afternoon.

40-Year-Old Span Reduced For Logs, Marketed

HUMPTULIPS, Wash. — (AP) — Timber felled more than 40 years ago is being cut into logs and sent to market by two Montesano loggers.

Using a caterpillar tractor, a gas donkey and a small crew of men, Donald Hill and Arnold Schmidt are removing the massive old East Forks splash dam from the Humptulips river, 30 miles north of Hoquiam.

The 100-foot-wide structure, estimated by old-timers to have contained 1,500,000 board feet of timber, is 40 feet high and has been unused for two decades. It was built by the Humptulips Driving company shortly after the turn of the century and water from its seven great gates sent billions of feet of timber surging into Grays Harbor during a 25-year period.

Although much of the upper part of the dam was built of hemlock and is rotten, four-foot-thick logs below are being bucked in 17-foot lengths and picked out of the narrow rock-walled channel by means of a spar tree.

State game officials, soil conservationists and Humptulips valley residents are watching the game of gigantic jackstraws with interest. Many residents below the aging dam have feared that it might go out in a spring freshet and imperil lives and property. In the meantime the structure has completely halted the progress of migratory fish.

Strikers Urged To Accept Offer Of N. Y. Newspaper

NEW YORK — (AP) — A group of World-Telegram and Sun employees have demanded that the CIO Newspaper guild of New York accept management's last offer and end its seven-week strike.

The group, 23 members of the newspaper's guild unit, terms itself "the guild committee for common sense."

It outlined its position in a 500-word mimeographed letter addressed "dear fellow staff member" and signed by David Snell and Harriet Van Horne, chairman and vice-chairman respectively of the committee.

The committee said in its letter that the last management offer, "embracing the New York Times grievance and security clauses," offered a means of returning to work "with honor."

The letter describes the leaders of the strike as "dictators" with a "tyrannical grip" on the guild unit.

Edward Easton, chairman of the guild's World-Telegram and Sun unit, said the letter "parrots management's claim that guild leaders do not have the backing of the membership."

He called the committee a "tiny minority" and said the letter represented a "strikebreaking maneuver apparently in cooperation with management."

Mrs. Van Horne denied this, saying in the committee had been "very careful to make sure we were not management inspired."

The strike by 400 editorial and business offices employees at the World-Telegram and Sun started June 13. Publication was suspended the same day after some 1,000 mechanical employees refused to cross guild picket lines.

Entered previously by executives and non-striking employees, the plant was shut down entirely last Tuesday.

The guild is seeking wage increase and job and union security clauses. Management has described the last two as the chief stumbling blocks to a settlement.
