Romantic Dream Shattered
When Waitress Oversleeps

LONG BEACH, Calif. —(AP)—Waitress Mary Sue Carney overslept Saturday and thus shattered a romantic dream. She had been waiting for a milkman to deliver milk to the cafe where she works has brought her a lovely red rose daily for the last 10 days. The same milkman also delivers to her home. Her alarm failed Saturday but she was awakened by the milkman's rattle. She peeked out the window and learned where the roses came from—her own garden.

Billy Falls On One Man
At Pasadena Revival

PASADENA —(AP)—Police today sought a hardened sinner who failed to get religion from the preaching of Evangelist Billy Graham. Some 50,000 attended the revival meeting Thursday night in the Rose Bowl and an estimated 1,000 or so were converted. But Albert C. Hamilton today reported to police that his pocket was picked of $480 at the revival.

Controls Not Felt Until
Oct. Or Nov., Group Says

WASHINGTON —(AP)—The National Association of Home Builders says the sharp pinch of new federal controls on mortgage credit won't be felt until October or November. Then it will be felt in "a drastic drop" in the construction of a new single family homes. Applications for Federal Housing Administration mortgage insurance, the association reported, have dropped from an average of 9,804 a week, before announcement of the controls to 5,510, the first step in the slowdown.

Forest Service Looks Ahead
To Day When Further Guards
Need To Protect Fish, Game

By WILLIAM E. LOWELL
AP Special Washington Service
WASHINGTON —(AP)—The forest service envisions a day when further protection must be given the fish and game of the wilderness areas of the West. But that time still appears to be far distant. These areas, which total 14,000,000 acres, mostly in the forested western states, were set aside years ago to be left untouched by civilization, so far as possible. Wild life enthusiasts, hunters and fishermen and outdoorsmen generally were welcome but there were to be no permanent new roads and no new airfields. However, the presidential proclamation did not entirely close out modern day means of travel. John Herbert, assistant recreation director for the forest service, explains that there is considerable private land within the western areas. Access to this land could not be prevented and no effort was made to halt airplane travel to it. This is true, for instance in the northern Idaho area, which, with the adjoining Selway-Bitter Root reserve in Montana, is the largest of the wilderness tracts — nearly 10 million acres. And the Idaho wild life federation is worried about the effect of this practice. Its members contend flying hunters and fishermen are denuding wide sections of the area of its game and fish. Herbert says there is as yet no indication the situation is serious enough to warrant an airplane ban in Idaho. There is a surplus of years ago to be left untouched by civilization, so far as possible. Wild life enthusiasts, hunters and fishermen and outdoorsmen generally were welcome but there were to be no permanent new roads and no new airfields. Economic Problems Account
For Army Buying On Market

by OVID A. MARTIN
Associated Press Farm Writer
WASHINGTON —(AP)—Why doesn't the army take food from surplus stocks held by the Agriculture department, rather than buy it in the market? This question keeps bobbing up in Congress and in letters to both the army and the Agriculture department. The question-raisers are under the impression that the government could save a lot of money if the army took the surplus. At present, the Agriculture department holds a considerable stocks of foods the army needs, such as butter, cheese, eggs, dried milk, potatoes and some dried fruits. Officials say that nothing could be gained by supplying the fighting forces from government surplus programs. Under the present arrangement of military buying, the armed services join with civilians to provide a broad market for many food items. Both military and civilian buying help to set and maintain a certain price level. Supplies in excess of civilian and military buying — the exports — are a "surplus." This surplus supply tends to pull down farm prices — often below levels at which the government is required by law to support them. When prices fall below the support levels, the Agriculture department under law must step in and remove the surplus from the market, either through purchases or loans to producers. If the army withdrew from the regular market, the amount bought there would be reduced. The surplus would be increased by the amount of the army's needs. This extra surplus would have to be bought by the Agriculture department under its price support promise. Money saved by the army in obtaining government surpluses would have to be spent by the Agriculture department to buy supplies which the military to longer bought in the market. Farm leaders are strongly opposed to the idea of supplying the armed services from government surpluses. They say that government spending to support farm prices would be increased considerably — a development which would sharpen current criticism of farm programs. There would be a tendency, they say, for the public to charge the increased farm support buying to farm programs rather than to defense programs.

James R. Banks of the Traffic Safety division, Salem, will be present at the meeting. Parents of the Wilbur community are asked to attend.

Installation Of Roseburg
Police Radio Published

Installation of the Roseburg police and fire departments' two-way radio system started a half page picture and story spread in the Sept. 7 issue of Link Bulletin, house organ of the Link Radio corporation. Pictures furnished by the News-Review and taken by staff photographer Paul Jenkins illustrated the article. Included in the photographs were Fire Chief William Mills, Police Chief Calvin Baird and Police Sgt. Ervin Best.

Freight Car Shortage
Slows Dam Project

HUNGRY HORSE, Mont. —(AP)—A railway freight car shortage threatens to slow construction of Hungry Horse dam, reclamation bureau engineers said Saturday. Supplies of cement on hand for the big dam in the Flathead river's west fork here in Northwest Montana are dwindling. If more freight cars don't become available, placement of concrete in the dam will be curtailed, reclamation engineers declared. This, they point out, would put work on the world's fourth-largest concrete dam behind schedule and delay water storage slated to start late in 1951 and power generation the next year.

WORKERS SHORT

PENDLETON —(AP)—A shortage of skilled workers is developing in the Pendleton-Hermiston-Umatilla area, the state employment office reports. There is a shortage of carpenters, car mechanics and plumbers. Domestic help is needed too.

LIFE'S EBBING SHADOWS—Korea's setting sun illuminates an otherwise dark horizon as a Medical Corpsman administers blood plasma to a seriously wounded American G.I. aboard a jeep transporting him to a first aid station. The soldier was hit during fierce fighting on the Pohang front. NEA-Acme Staff Correspondent Stanley Tretick, who took this picture, suffered a slight shrapnel wound in the same action.

Eugene Carpenter
Wins Air Medal

Award of the Air medal for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight over enemy held territory in Korea, has been made to Sgt. Eugene V. Carpenter, husband of Mrs. Betty JoAnn Carpenter of Riddle.

Sgt. Carpenter received this decoration for 10 aerial flights over North Korean-held territory during the period July 26 through Aug. 29 in a light liaison plane of the 1st Cavalry division's aviation section. He is a member of headquarters battery, 1st cavalry division artillery.

These "grasshopper" pilots of the light aviation section use some of the U. S. Army's smallest planes. Their primary duty is to spot and direct artillery on enemy positions. They are also used as a method of evacuating seriously wounded troops from the front lines to the rear aid stations and relaying firing missions.
