Writer Notes Things Greed Can Do For The Communists

They don't trust people to curb their own selfishness and, by reasonable and fair conduct with one another, keep the economy intact.

The Communist leadership imposes iron controls on all phases of living including prices, wages, ownership of property, and so on.

By their control of prices and wages, for example, they can limit the ability of the people to buy or hoard goods or food.

The theory behind the American government is that people by themselves can act reasonably and fairly, curbing their greed without government interference and, in this reasonable way, keep the economy intact.

Since this government represents all the people — and it really is the people — who it does interfere, it's supposed to do so for the general welfare and to protect the majority against some minority unfairness.

This American hatred for government interference is the basis of the people's freedom. And this country now is involved in a struggle with communism to keep it from winning and swallowing up the freedom.

The struggle grows more intense and may wind up in a world war in which communism or freedom will win, but not both. To be ready for the showdown if it comes, this country is re-arming, which means, as President Truman said, things will be different.

As more materials go into armament, there'll be less left for the luxuries and gadgets which people could buy so freely until now. Meanwhile, getting ready for the worst in human nature, the government has created a new C.P.A., called the Economic Stabilization agency.

This agency will have the job of controlling prices and wages and rationing, too — if such controls become necessary.

And the President has made W. Stuart Symington the nation's mobilization chief. His job is to coordinate all defense activities of civilian agencies. One of those activities is to see that plants doing defense work get the materials they need, even if other businesses have to do without.

It is too soon to say — unless there is a great emergency — whether any goods will become scarce enough to pinch anyone. They may. And therein lies the challenge to the people of this country.

Will they let greed and selfishness get the better of them? Will they start hoarding and buying more than they need? Will businessmen take advantage of shortages to hike prices unnecessarily or try to hoard scarce materials?

If they do, the government will slap on controls, and the greater the greed, the wider the controls, getting tougher. It will mean wide controls to prevent the people from wrecking their own economy.

(Already some of this has happened. Symington said most recent price increases were due to a few "unpatriotic chiselers." He said "serious damage" is being done by "people new in the market, organized to make an illegal or black market profit, or at least a profiteering profit.")

The government is going to issue an anti-hoarding order to industry next week.

If the American economy was wrecked, the Communists would have it that much easier to take over. It would prove what they've long proclaimed:

That a capitalist society carries within it the seeds of its own destruction and, sooner or later, must wreck itself.

It certainly would be ironic if Americans, prizing freedom and struggling to preserve it, meanwhile let their greed produce a victory for the thing they're fighting.

It also would be ironic if, hating government controls, they brought those controls on themselves by failing to act reasonably.

May Is Released From Penitentiary

ASHLAND, Ky. — (AP) — Former Rep. Andrew J. May was released from the Ashland Federal Correctional institution early today after serving nine months and 13 days for wartime conspiracy and bribery.

He left the prison as he had entered it last Dec. 5, under cover of darkness.

May, who turned 75 while in prison, was described as in "some-what better health" than when he entered.

Although his age and health were given by the federal parole board as factors in his release, he was described by a spokesman as a "few pounds heavier," and having "better color."

Warden R. O. Culver said that the former chairman of the House Military Affairs committee was met at the gate at 12:15 a. m. by his son, Robert V. May.

May had been sentenced to eight to 24 months.
