Old World Crop Good Prospect For Inland Area

PULLMAN — (P) — Safflower, a crop grown by farmers of the old world hundreds of years ago, is a good prospect for a permanent crop in the Inland Empire. That opinion is shared by growers, processors and industrial researchers who met yesterday at Washington State college. However, a Spokane area farmer, who has raised the crop, reported that much work is needed on the part of agronomists and processors before the potential value of safflower can be realized. The farmer, Walter L. Scott, has grown the crop for three years. Research workers indicate the plant, because of its high oil yield, could become a keen competitor of the popular soy bean. And it

'Female Cities' Gain In Number, Study Shows

BOULDER, CO. — (P) — The number of "female cities" is on the increase in the United States. This comes from Dr. Joseph Greenberg, sociologist at the University of Colorado. He says that examples of cities with large "female surpluses" are: Pasadena, Calif.; Winnetka, Ill.; Beverly Hills, Calif.; Macon, Ga.; Montgomery, Ala.; and University City, Mo. Greenberg says that extensive study shows that cities of this type "tend to develop an economy specifically directed toward the use of woman-power." He listed as examples of "male cities" at the other end of the scale: Butte, Mont.; Grand Coulee, Wash.; Bessemer, Mich.; Dearborn, Mich.; and East Chicago, Ind.

can be produced at a slightly lower cost than soy beans, said Dr. R. L. Albrook, director of the college industrial research division in trials on experimental plots near Pullman, safflower yielded nearly 40 percent of its weight in oil. Researchers say an average yield of 30 percent, or more, is almost a sure thing. Twenty percent would be comparable figure for soy beans. The bulk yield in Pullman tests amounted to 1,438 pounds of seed per acre. One industrial use to which safflower can be put is the production of enamel, a California processor told the group.

Men Should Wear Hats, Fashion Designer Says
HOLLYWOOD — (P) — The hat-bashers have found a new ally in their campaign to get all men folk hatted — Mme. Elsa Schiaparelli, no less. Says Mme. Schiaparelli, a Parisian fashion designer of some repute: "I don't think a man is fully dressed without a hat, just like a woman." If all gents wear hats, she added, the ladies too will want to dress in a first class. Are men capable of picking out their own hats? The lady says no.
