Congress Control Main Stake In Today's Vote

can presidential nomination in 1952 if he is re-elected to the Senate.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, Republican nominee didn't win the presidency in 1944 and 1948, fought hard for re-election as governor, winding up his campaign with a marathon television stint. Dewey says he won't try again for the presidential nomination.

His 1948 running mate, Gov. Earl Warren of California, will be in the picture if he is re-elected for a third term as governor. Another Republican governor, James H. Duff of Pennsylvania, is bidding for the seat of Senator Myers, the assistant Democratic leader. If Duff gets it, he may have something to say about who is the GOP presidential nominee in 1952.

On the Democratic side, Gov. Chester Bowles is in the political fight of his life in Connecticut. If he wins re-election, he might be counted in the 1952 presidential calculations, if President Truman chooses not to run again.

Senator Lucas of Illinois, the Democratic leader, also has a hard fight for reelection. If he wins, he may have to be reckoned with in 1952. His defeat probably would plunge senate Democrats into a battle over party leadership there.

Gov. Frank J. Lausche of Ohio will remain a figure in the Democratic national setup if he wins re-election. But Lausche's refusal to come out against Taft hasn't endeared him to some party leaders.

Re-election in Michigan also would give Gov. G. Mennen Williams more national prominence among the Democrats.

F. R.'s Surrender Policy Surprised, Churchill Says

NEW YORK — (AP) — Winston Churchill writes in his memoirs that he was surprised when President Roosevelt announced the "unconditional surrender" policy at the 1943 Casablanca conference, but that he backed up the President's declaration to preserve allied unity.

Critics of the policy have argued that it prolonged the war.

Writing in Life magazine, the British wartime prime minister says he asked his cabinet's advice on the policy of unconditional surrender prior to the Casablanca meeting, but adds: "Meanwhile, the official joint statement was being prepared by our advisers and by the chiefs of staff. There is no mention in it of 'unconditional surrender.'"

"It was with some feeling of surprise," Churchill writes, "that I heard the President say at the press conference on Jan. 24 that we would enforce 'unconditional surrender' upon all our enemies. It was natural to suppose that the agreed communique had superseded anything said in conversation."

"In my speech which followed the President's, I, of course, supported him and concurred in what he said. Any divergence between us, even by omission, would have been damaging or even dangerous to our war effort. I certainly take my share of the responsibility, together with the British cabinet."

Churchill quotes President Roosevelt as saying to the late Harry Hopkins that the "unconditional surrender" phrase "popped into my mind" during the press conference, "and the next thing I knew I had said it."

Churchill comments on this: "I do not feel that this frank statement is in any way weakened by the fact that the phrase occurs in the notes from which he (the President) spoke."

Science Writer Advises Atomic Bomb Precautions

SEATTLE — (AP) — One of the nation's outstanding science writers said here today that precautionary action could cut sharply the casualties from an atomic bomb.

Howard Blakeslee of New York, science editor for the Associated Press, a group of editors from Oregon, Washington and North Idaho that the casualty total from the atom blasts over Japan could have been reduced by one-third if people had known what to do and how to act.

He suggested the public education on what to do in case of an atomic attack warning should be carried into the schools. He described how even a piece of white writing paper could be a valuable aid against bomb flash burns at certain distances.

Blakeslee addressed the annual banquet of the editors of Associated Press member newspapers Friday night.

Preceding the banquet, the Washington state editors reelected W. H. Cowley, publisher of the Spokane Spokesman-Review, as chairman of the state group and the Oregon editors reelected Robert Notson, managing editor of the Portland Oregonian.

In the annual photo contest, Roy Scully of the Seattle Times, won the sweepstakes prize in a field of nearly 275 exhibits. It was a photo of a mother and father rejoicing over the return of their lost child.

Bill Jenkins, managing editor of the Klamath Falls Herald and News, was reelected chairman of the Oregon committee to maintain a continuing study of the cooperative press association's news and picture services. Howard Cleavinger, managing editor of the Spokane Chronicle, was named chairperson of the Washington committee.

Those named to serve with Jenkins were Lucian Arant, publisher of the Baker Democrat-Herald and Robert Letts Jones, assistant publisher of the Salem Capital Journal.

Teacher Slain in Bed Roommate Questioned

NEW YORK — (AP) — A 30-year-old Harvard graduate and college instructor was found naked and stabbed to death on his bed this morning in a mid-Manhattan apartment.

Police identified him as Karl T. Ohi, a mathematics instructor and tutor who had been teaching at a small New Jersey college.

Police took his roommate, Herbert Landau, a 55-year-old portrait artist, into custody for questioning.

Denmark Rid Of Butter Rationing After 10 Years

COPENHAGEN, Denmark — (AP) — Butter, which greased the slide under Denmark's last government, has been melted from the ration list by the new coalition regime.

The eight-day-old government of Agrarians and Conservatives has de-rationed both butter and margarine for the first time in 10 years in this dairy industry land.

The socialist government of Hans Hedtoft fell Oct. 25 after a bitter debate over its policy of rationing butter to save as much as possible for foreign trade — mainly with Britain.

Rural Areas Advised To Attract More Medics

PORTLAND — (AP) — Rural areas should do more to attract doctors and dentists, speakers said at the first Oregon rural health conference here.

Jean W. Scheel, assistant director of Oregon State college extension service, said offices and even homes might be provided to eliminate one complaint of young doctors who decide against general rural practice.

Dr. William J. Weese, Ontario, society, said schools might also endeavor to turn out fewer specialists. He said it was the job of the profession to improve medical services in small towns and farm communities.

"The best weapon to fight socialized medicine is an active interest by the individual doctor in the health problems of his community," Dr. Weese said.

The conference ended with a proposal that an Oregon health council be formed to coordinate rural programs by professional, agency and volunteer organizations.

The 1951 meeting may be separated into an eastern Oregon and western Oregon session.

The Civil War developed an appetite for news among the people.

WINE COSTS SO LITTLE... ADDS SO MUCH
Burgundy, for example, the red table wine which goes well with red meat—and Sauterne, the white table wine to serve with chicken or fish—are both inexpensive.

WHAT IS TABLE WINE?

- ✓ Nature's way to preserve fine grapes
- ✓ The beverage of moderation
- ✓ That which makes good food taste better

TABLE WINE is the pure fermented juice of vine-ripened fresh grapes. It is a product of agriculture, as bread and butter are. And so table wines—like Claret, Burgundy, Sauterne and Rhine Wines—go particularly well with meals.

In growing wines, the ripe grapes are first separated from the stems. Then the grapes are crushed and allowed to ferment. The young wine goes next into large storage casks to settle and age. And as time goes on it is drawn off into smaller and smaller casks, each time becoming clearer in color and finer in flavor.

Finally wine is bottled and continues to improve with age. Wine is simply nature's way to preserve good grapes. For a free booklet of wine-cooking ideas and recipes, write Wine Advisory Board, 717 Market Street, San Francisco.
