FORTUITOUS VICTORY

By CHARLES V. STANTON

Republicans have no cause, we believe, to sprain their arms patting themselves on the back. Last Tuesday's election, in our opinion, was not a vote FOR Republicans or AGAINST Democrats. It was, rather, a vote AGAINST certain policies, theories and conditions. Democrats were beaten because they were identified with those issues, while the Republicans won through fortuity.

We do not profess to be an expert in political affairs, but a person need not be an expert to realize that the "G.O.P. Landslide," emblazoned in newspaper headlines was not necessarily an endorsement of Republicanism.

Two things stand out very clearly. First, voters want Communism cleaned out of government. Second, the American voter refuses to be "pressured" by dictatorship in the way he marks his ballot.

The democratic party has played along with the Reds. It has been pals with labor's political action groups. Consequently the Democrats took a licking.

Democratic leadership undoubtedly can read the handwriting on the wall and will vastly alter policy during the next two years, in preparation for the next presidential election. Republicans, too, should realize that results of the off-year election did not necessarily mean a defection in the ranks of democratic voters, but, instead, was a demand for a clean-up within the party itself.

Oregon Vote Good Example

In Oregon, for instance, we believe anyone will concede that had Austin Fliegel campaigned on his record as a state senator, he would have had a very good chance for election. Instead, he permitted himself to become a front for the Monroe Sweetland Socialist crowd, shadow-boxed, back-pedaled, reviled and ranted, and thereby lost the respect and support of his friends.

Yet Wayne Morse, unquestionably further to the left than Austin Fliegel could drive himself, would have been elected with simply the democratic vote he received.

This apparent paradox would indicate repudiation of the Socialist-Democrat alliance without necessarily showing endorsement of republican conservatism.

In the national election, every candidate tied in as a friend of Communists was unceremoniously given the boot.

Labor Misplays Its Cards

In Oregon, as elsewhere throughout the nation, especially in Ohio, labor threw a boomerang. The very pressure it exerted upon rank-and-file membership built up resentment expressed at the polling place.

At meeting after meeting in Oregon, laboring men affiliated with various unions were harangued, threatened and cajoled concerning their "duty" in voting against candidates opposed by labor leadership. But not one of labor's favorites won. The laboring man indicated quite clearly that he still retains the right to vote independently and that excessive pressure gets results in reverse of intent.

Republican candidates were elected, we believe, only because Democrats are trying to clean up their own party. Republicans have no occasion to become cocky or overly optimistic. They do, however, have before them an opportunity to build a constructive, aggressive program which might lead to victory in 1952.

sive spearheads and next with reinforcements and supplies.

So the Yalu is now the big hot spot.

We are apparently pulling no punches so far.

There are reports this morning that we are bombing the Korean ends of the Yalu bridges. The center of the river is theoretically the boundary. So when we bomb only the KOREAN ends of the bridges we are taking merely defensive action. If we bombed the Manchurian ends, we would be taking OFFENSIVE action.

Our story is that red China is an aggressor. Hence our tactics at the Yalu.

The Yalu is in cold country—40 below and better in the winter. SO—when the river freezes over, the commies will probably cross on the ice.

How about that?

Well, we can shell and bomb the ice. Germany's Hindenburg did that to a Russian army in the Mazurian lakes country in World War I and stopped the Russians' clock. The shelling and bombing broke up the ice and the Russians drowned.

That, of course, was easier in an area of lakes and wide marshes than on a comparatively narrow river. But we'll undoubtedly try it if the commies try to cross on the ice when the river freezes.

Watch the Yalu for tangible, physical evidence of what communist China is going to do. Watch United Nations for intangible, diplomatic evidence. In big affairs like this, that may lead to shooting war on a big scale, the diplomats and the high military leadership work closely together.

This is the hard nub of the situation:

What is Russia up to? Communist China is the cub. Communist Russia is the MAMA BEAR. If a bear cub bothers you when you're picking 'uckleberries, you boot the little devil out of the way and go on with your berry picking.

But when the mama bear shows up with blood in her eye— Well, that's another matter.

Use Of U.S. Funds To Guard Judge's Home Scored

CHARLESTON, S. C. (AP)—Rep. L. Mendel Rivers (D-S.C.), who earlier this year joined in a movement to have Federal Judge J. W. Waring impeached, Sunday lashed out at the use of federal funds to guard the judge's home here.

Rivers declared in a statement that the posting of U. S. marshals at the judge's home was "the most useless and unnecessary expenditure in the history of the U. S. government."

The marshals were assigned to Waring's home Oct. 10, one day after the house had been stoned. Through Nov. 10, Rivers said, the guards had cost the government $1,103.

"This expenditure is against the law," he charged. He did not explain why it was unlawful. Waring and his wife have been ostracized by white Charleston society because of their championship of equal rights for Negroes.

In the last session of Congress, a move was started by the South Carolina delegation to initiate impeachment proceedings against the judge. The move failed to come to a head, however.

REENTERS AIR FORCE

He reported to the 2219th personnel processing center, Portland airport, and successfully underwent the examination. Before reentering the air force, he was a salesman at Montgomery Ward Co. in Roseburg. His parents, Ole T. and Irene Oleson, live in Eugene. Oleson first entered military service Sept. 21, 1943, at Fort Lewis, Wash. He was a radio operator, and served during the last war in the European theater, where he received one battle star.

Awaiting The Signal--

Spoons from the MENDING BASKET

By Vianett S. Martin

"Yesterday," writes Mrs. D. "was our fifty-second wedding anniversary. . . . The words brought a picture of an elderly couple who are about as un-elderly people as you could find! They radiate energy, friendliness, joy of living, and are always seeking some way to help another—wherein may lie one of their secrets for their being well on their way to a diamond wedding anniversary.

That "52" makes our own "31," also this week, seem a lot less than when the young school-teacher exclaimed: "Gosh, when you were married, I was just a year old!" And he looked us over with frank blue eyes that saw us much further along than we felt we were. He should meet the D's! There is something so heart-warming, so inspiring about a couple who have weathered the storms that come to us all in one form or another, and have kept their love for each other snug and secure for over half a century. After all, it isn't the storms that are important to the marriage founded on love. Love is it? It's the weathering of the storms that is important. When one starts out, as in a new ship on its shakedown cruise, there are so many little adjustments, many signs of a bit of work needed here or there, all of which is taken as just a part of the beginning of that ship's life at sea. Then comes the day when perhaps a storm tests the ship's helm, and a little oil on the seas, the oil of gentleness, of sympathy, or understanding, of desire to see the other side, the ship comes through, and on looking back, one remembers with gratitude only the successful overcoming of the trial.

I don't know just what the D's would say was the recipe for a successful marriage—they read this column, so maybe they'll tell us—but I do know one recipe that has its merits. It might be summed up in the suggestion, never part without a kiss. Never let there be a first time without a goodnight kiss. No matter how "mad," how aggrieved, how determined to make it a "matter of principle," usually just a stubborn determination to be acknowledged as "in the right," conquer pride and let a kiss take the place of a million words. Not a self-righteous peck, but one given to that lad, or that lass, one married, still there, sterling silver, under what seems at the moment a bit of tarnish! The kiss, not which one gives it, is the important thing.

Canyonville Votes Tuesday On New School Property

J. L. Turnbull, state school building consultant and Kenneth F. Barnburg, Douglas county school superintendent, recently inspected the Stock property in Canyonville and approved its use by the Canyonville high school for expansion purposes.

An election will be held on Tuesday, Nov. 14, at which time the voters in the Canyonville school district are asked to approve the purchase of the property. The property is wanted by the school for an athletic field.

Omer J. Monger, Canyonville superintendent of schools, received the following letter from Turnbull concerning the Stock purchase: "Mr. Barnburg and I viewed the proposed new addition to the Canyonville school site and I am still of the opinion that the proposal outlined by the State Highway commission will prove very satisfactory."

"The Stock property was considered some time ago and at that time I was of the opinion that it would go a long way toward meeting the needs of the school. I am still of that opinion."

"I believe the school will profit by this proposed change. It may be necessary in the future to acquire more property, if the enrollment grows, but for the present time it should serve."

CROWN POINT, Ind. (AP)—The Indian disguise of Howard E. Lee Jr., carnival sword swallower and knife thrower from Chatham, Ont., didn't help him much in Lake County jail today.

U.N. Faces Perilous Crisis In Korea Because Of Chinese Action At Russia's Behest

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

The Chinese Communists, in open defiance of Lake Success, have invaded Korea and attacked forces fighting in under the flag of the United Nations. This has been officially confirmed by General MacArthur in a special report.

The situation is tense—one of the most critical moments since the end of World War II.

The United States has called for a special meeting of the U.N. security council to consider this fresh crisis.

If further proof were needed that China is acting with the blessings of Russia, it could be found in an amazing official speech delivered in Moscow by Deputy Premier Bulganin, one of Russia's great personalities.

Bulganin singled out communist China for special praise. He declared that Korea has "become the banner of all oppressed peoples fighting for liberation" and hinted that the tide may turn there. He asserted that the Koreans had suffered a measure of defeat because America had flung into the fight all its Far Eastern forces, and some from other countries.

This is an uncomfortable moment for at least some of the score of nations which rushed in and extended diplomatic recognition to the Chinese Communist government in Peking. There can be no doubt that the regime got great encouragement from these recognitions. Now Britain, for one, is considering canceling her recognition.

Of course, the big question today is what the U. N. can do about this Chinese assault. The Chinese can be condemned and asked to withdraw their invading troops—but suppose they refuse? That presents a dangerous problem.

It is safe to assume that in making this daring venture, China is banking that neither the United States nor the United Nations will make all-out war against her. And why should Peking feel that way? Because continental China would be most difficult of invasion by Russian troops, excepting from Russian territory. She could be reached by bombers—but bombing wouldn't conquer such a vast area with its millions of fighting men.

This great reservoir of armed strength, working with Red Russia, will continue to present a terrific threat to the democracies so long as it exists. As I have remarked in a previous column, communist China is the heart of the Bolshevik drive in Asia.

The Peking regime is reaching in every direction. What is happening in Korea, French Indochina and Tibet is casting its shadow across Burma, Malaya and other countries.

Whatever decision may be reached by the U. N. in this Korea crisis, it seems clear there is one essential: this is that there be concerted action among the peace-makers.

Beautification Ceremony Completed By Pope

VATICAN CITY — In the final beautification ceremony of the holy year, Pope Pius XII Sunday raised Mother Marguerite Bourgeois to the blessed of the Roman Catholic church.

Born in France in 1620, she founded the order of the Sisters of Our Lady in the Canadian wilderness 300 years ago.

More than 1,200 Canadian pilgrims and 40 archbishops and bishops were among the thousands of spectators at the ceremony in the basilica of St. Peter.

'CIRCUS TENT'—The air force's air material command at Wright-Patterson air force base, Dayton, O., has developed this new 20-man life raft which is capable of supporting more than 5,000 pounds without sinking. The raft, designed especially for use in ditching operations, is a snug, dry and highly buoyant refuge for downed airmen. Top, the canopy is raised to provide added ventilation. Bottom, the canopy is closed. The raft is made from two rubberized nylon flotation tubes.

CHICAGO (AP)—Fred J. Miller testified he came home at night to find a stranger sleeping on the couch. He called police who awakened Paul Bernard Hoppe, 28, and found he had: Broken into the house, taken a shower and used Miller's hair oil and shaving cream. Put on underwear and a shirt belonging to Miller's son, and donned Miller's best necktie and shoes. Fixed himself a sandwich, drank a can of beer and ate some bananas and cream and a piece of Mrs. Miller's fruit cake.

Taken $7.38 from her penny jar. Hoppe pleaded guilty to petty larceny, and told the felony court he had been awfully hungry and sleepy.

Sentencing him to a one year jail term, Judge John Gutknecht commented: "You may not find the food as good, but you'll have plenty of time to nap."
