Gill Net Tried In Tuna Fishing

By ROWLAND EVANS, JR. (AP) Special Washington Service

WASHINGTON — (AP) — An experimental government fishing expedition has reported "considerable success" late last summer with a brand new method of catching the delectable albacore, the tastiest of the tuna tribe.

Officials of the Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS) are wary of predictions, but they say the use of gill nets to snare the speedy albacore in coastal waters south of Alaska may prove a blessing to the industry if:

1. The operation can be modified, with one eye to efficiency and the other to economy.
2. Albacore taken in gill nets are found to be of as high quality as those caught the conventional way.

The conventional way is by hook and line, using either bait or a jug as the lure. A jug is made of plastic, with feathers on it. Usually each fishing boat carries about eight lines simultaneously.

The experiment was conducted on a new experimental vessel, the "John N. Cobb," which left Seattle early in the summer and fished southern Alaskan and British Columbian waters until fall.

In charge of the experiment was Joseph Ellison, who has just been transferred here as assistant chief of the FWS exploratory fisheries section.

Ellison told a reporter today the vessel will leave Seattle next June to do some more experimenting with gill nets.

Telephone service is still a bargain...for since 1940, rates have gone up much less than the cost of living.

GOOD FRIEND OF THE FAMILY BUDGET

The telephone actually takes less of it than in 1940

1. Seems like the prices of most things you buy have about doubled, in the last ten years. Among the standout exceptions is your telephone service. There have been rate increases, of course, to help meet increased costs of furnishing service...higher wages, higher prices for materials, higher costs generally. But telephone rates have gone up far less than most other things. And that's only part of the story.

2. Telephone installers are making your service a better all-around bargain, too. When you buy a pound of something, you still get sixteen ounces...although the price may have doubled. Twelve items still make a dozen. But not so with telephone service. Your telephone dollars buy, on the average, twice as many available connections as ten years ago...for we've more than doubled the system in that time.

3. Today you can call more of the people you want to call...many more people can call you. And the calls you get are often more important than the calls you make. Yet average telephone rates have gone up less than half as much as the cost of living generally. They're up much less than our costs of providing service. If all comes down to this: Today telephone service can be purchased for fewer hours of work than in 1940. Your telephone is a mighty good friend of the family budget.
