Businessman's Plan To Become Monk Strikes Snag

LOS ANGELES — (P) — Donald Foster, the San Francisco businessman who left his wife last January with the intention of becoming a monk, discloses that he has quit a Minnesota monastery "for the time being."

Foster said he left St. John's abbey, a Benedictine monastery at Collegeville, Minn., last Sunday after consultation with authorities there.

He declined to discuss his withdrawal.

Abbey officials at Collegeville said Foster was going back home to "talk things over with his wife and see whether it is possible to fulfill the conditions which at the present time cannot be met." Details of the requirements were not disclosed.

For 18 years Foster had been a supervising investigator for the California State Board of Equalization, a regulatory tax and licensing body.

Foster was 50 years old last January 3 when he announced he was going to enter the monastery.

He and Mrs. May C. Brown Foster had been married for 25 years. At the time he made the announcement in San Francisco, Foster said:

"We have prayed for 20 years
