

Lauren Bacall Admits Actors Are Not Normal

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD—(AP)—Lauren Bacall comes right out with the admission that the acting folk are not normal. In fact, they might even be a bit whacky.

This is quite a revelation. For years Hollywood has been trying to tell us that movie stars are "just plain folks" like the people next door. I have always believed that to be pure malarkey. If all citizens were like movie stars, this would be a fascinating, but some catastrophic world.

Miss Bacall believes so, too. She remarked:

"A person has to be un-normal to get into this kind of a business. Normal people couldn't take it."

"In the first place, you have to be slightly demented to make a fool of yourself in front of dozens of bored people. In the movie business, you have to do tense scenes in front of a whole crew of people who don't care a bit about what you are doing. They've been there for years and have seen Colleen Moore, Gloria Swanson and many others before you.

Visitors Gape

"Very often you will find yourself playing a dramatic scene face-to-face with some gaping tourist visiting the studio. How can you be normal and do that?"

"Also, you have to be a little nuts to get up at six o'clock every morning to go to work."

"The look," as she was known in her earlier film days, admitted that acting people can be hard to live with. She is married to one, a guy named Humphrey Bogart.

"But you can get along with them, if you know enough to keep quiet at the right time," she added. "Fortunately, Bogie is one of the least temperamental actors I know, so we don't have too much trouble."

It's also hazardous marrying an actress, she remarked frankly. "They're inclined to high and low moods," she observed. "Bogie's father told him never to marry an actress, but he went ahead and married four of them."

Actually, the Bogart-Bacall match is fairly tranquil, she said. They have occasional tangles "always over nothing at all, as it is with all married couples." I asked if they ever get to the stage of throwing things.

Wrong Wife

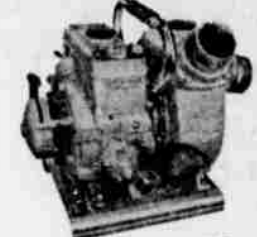

"No, dear, that was the last wife—remember?" she answered, referring to the third Mrs. B. Mayn Meibohm.

Acquaintances of Bogart have remarked that his current marriage seems to be the most successful in their own tough-talking sort of way. The Bogarts appear devoted to each other and to their young son, Stephen.

Such is Mrs. Bogart's devotion that she plans to follow the actor to Africa next year. He will go on location to star with Katharine Hepburn in John Huston's "The African Queen."

Capsule Review: "For Heaven's Sake" has the makings of good fantasy, but doesn't always realize its potential. The story has two angles (Clifton Webb and Edmund Gwenn) coming down to earth to help a little girl get born. Her chosen parents are a theatrical couple (Robert Cummings and Joan Bennett) who are too busy to have a child. The angels' efforts provide a few good laughs, but the script goes overboard too often for comedy. With a defter touch, it could have been a winner.
