Gun Kills Husband, Puts Wife in Hospital

PORTLAND — (P) — A wild outburst of shooting brought death Thursday to John Roseback, 51, and serious wounds to his estranged wife, Winifred.

Police reported evidence of at least 13 shots fired from Roseback's gun.

Mrs. Barbara Larson, neighbor on S. E. Center street, said Mrs. Roseback, separated from her husband, drove up to his house with two women companions. They unloaded empty boxes as if intending to pick up something at the house. Mrs. Roseback entered the door and a shot was fired. The women with her ran back to the car.

A police car pulled up and a bullet crashed out of the front window of the house. More police arrived as did an ambulance.

More shots were fired, then police broke in a rear door and entered.

Roseback was shot through the head, apparently by his own gun. Mrs. Roseback was wounded several times.

He died in a hospital. Her condition there was reported "not good."

The News-Review

the case of the INVISIBLE HINGE

Yes, sir, a fellow walked in the other day and asked if anybody had ever invented an invisible hinge! If we were in any other kind of business we might have gawped and grinned and phoned for the booby hatch truck. But not here . . . no sir, we not only knew there was such a thing but we had 'em for sale! The gentleman bought a couple and left. No, he didn't buy a hunk of thin air . . . he bought a Soss brand invisible hinge . . . a clever rig that can be installed in doors. The hinge gets its name from the fact that it isn't visible except by closely inspecting the inside of the door jamb. Works, too.

The point is this: like most hardware stores we stock an amazing variety of items you probably don't know exist. Things like escutcheons and flush rings, for example. You might expect we stock wrenches and hammers and we do . . . but we also carry a line of grafting wax, calf weaners and curry combs, too. You might have a special problem in fixin' or buildin' or tinkerin' and find that we have equipment or tools especially designed for your purpose . . . something you didn't know had ever been made. Yes, we Americans are pretty ingenious people and a great share of our ingenuity often turns up at a hardware store. Whether you intend to buy or not . . . drop in and browse around. We're partial to "lookers" because so many become customers.
