18-Year-Olds Not Best Fighters, War Vet Says

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Rep. Teague (D-Tex.) World War Two officer who was wounded six times in European fighting, says 18-year-old soldiers don't make the best fighters.

Advocating a universal military training program emphasizing a large and active reserve corps, Teague in a newsletter said he believed the defense department "has not made a case" for drafting of 18-year-olds.

He declared that before such a step is taken there should be a thorough screening of men in the 19 to 26 age group, and added: "Many argue that the 18-year-old boy with a few months of training makes the best soldier in the world. This is not true from my experience during World War Two as our best all-round fighters were more mature men who could withstand extreme mental and physical punishment. Recklessness does not make for the best combat soldier."

Eisenhower, Morse said, looks best now of the potential candidates, but he added: "I'll go along with anyone else who can win."
