

Sunday Most Dangerous Day On Highways, Data Shows

If you're a Sunday driver, the secretary of state's traffic safety division has just released figures that may take some of the pleasure out of your Sunday afternoon cruises this spring and summer.

Sunday, the division states, is the most dangerous day on the highways. It accounts for fewer accidents, but each accident has far more lethal possibilities than on any other day.

During 1950, Sunday led all other days of the week with 86 fatal wrecks. Saturday registered 82 fatal mishaps, and Tuesday was third with 52 death-dealing accidents. Monday and Friday tied for fourth place honors with 50 each. Wednesday accounted for 51 fatal smash-ups, and Thursday came in last with 36.

The division figures reveal that in total accidents of all types, Sunday was fifth on the list with 9,732. This figure points up the fact that more Sunday mishaps take place at high speed on rural highways and as a result are more likely to kill.

Canyonville May Queen Chosen

Miss Vera Mason of Tacoma, Wash. has been chosen May day queen and will reign over all affairs at the annual May day festival at the Canyonville Bible academy Friday, May 4, at 2:00 p.m. on the CBA ball field across Canyon creek. The public is invited. The queen was chosen by the faculty. Miss Louise Linn of Longview, Wash., was selected maid of honor. Both girls are seniors.

It will be sung by the girls glee club: "Song of Home," "Love's Old Sweet Song" and "My Sunlight" will be sung by the boys glee club; "Carmena" by Wilson, sung by Lois Collins; "Spring Song" by Mendelssohn, violin solo, Don Phillips; "Normal" and "Mister Joe" by the band.

The queen's attendants will be Helen Johnson, Mildred Rhode and James Nilson, seniors; Dawn Dunbar, Evelyn Hampton and Phillip Littlejohn, juniors; Dolly Lamont, Loretta Vales and Telford Stone, sophomores; Marilyn Hendrix, Janice Brown and Bryton Osgood, freshmen. Each class selects its own attendants.

Military Life Boon To College Men, Prexy Says

By DAVID TAYLOR MARKE ANNANDALE - ON - HUDSON, N. Y. — (AP) — Most college students are too young for their breeches, says an outspoken American educator.

James H. Case Jr., president of Barnard college, says "it might be wiser if the average high school graduate waited until he was a little more mature before he began his college career."

The question is pointed up by current discussions concerning universal military training.

"The year or more a youth spends away from home and academic halls may mean the difference between aimless course-taking and education with a purpose," the educator explained in an interview.

The teens are the most turbulent years in life. Case pointed out, and boys and girls in those stages for the most part lack purpose or motivation.

"They are still undecided what their vocations should be. They are responsive to almost everything. They will accept almost anything fed to them by their instructors."

But a year or two later, "after social experiences such as army life has to offer, and partly because of the age difference, boys begin to settle down. They're not swayed so easily. They have a better understanding of what they want to do. They pay closer attention to what a teacher says and they don't accept his conclusions without thinking them through for themselves."

Service in the armed forces has shown, says Case, that young men placed on their own for a year or two achieved relative independence and proved themselves while away from their families.
