Terrified Chinese Ready To Revolt, Missioner Says

By FRED HAMPSON

HONG KONG — (AP) — An American missionary who was forced out of a remote part of Human province after 26 years in China says the Reds have clamped iron control over China's millions in the back country but 95 percent would revolt if they could.

He asked that he not be identified for fear of reprisals.

He was expelled for various "reactionary" crimes, including praying for the souls of four Chinese Christians who had been purged.

Terror prevails throughout the towns and villages — much worse than in the large cities like Canton and Shanghai, he said.

"In my country of 1,200,000 population there have been at least 4,000 executions. The purging started last September. First it was the guerrillas, saboteurs and bandits. Now it's mostly landlords."

"Everybody whispers, 'business men will be next.'"

The missionary said the Red's land reform program had failed to achieve the desired result in his county and that after the land was divided, half of it was left over because not enough poor peasants qualified. The leftover land has been converted into government farms and now is being worked by forced labor, he said.

"The Reds claim they killed 8,000 guerrillas in my section," the clergyman said. "I think that's too high, but I know that about 25,000 suspected bandits were sent north for forced labor."

"If Chiang Kai-shek were to reinvade the mainland, 95 percent of the Chinese of my section would try to join him."

"One division of the Fourth field army withdrew from our area in February and militia recruits came in. They were poor soldiers, cowed and spiritless, but the Reds are trying hard to improve them."

"There is a good deal of minor corruption among the Reds despite reports to the contrary. There is much pilfering by troops."

"The Reds have almost twice as many government workers in the countryside as Chiang had. Only a few don't work for them some way. But 95 percent would sell the Reds out today if they could, including most of their own soldiers."

Aluminum Plant To Rise Near Wenatchee, Wash.

SEATTLE — (AP) — An Aluminum Company of America official announced the firm will build a new $50,000,000 aluminum plant near Wenatchee, Wash.

The announcement was made by C. S. Thayer, Alcoa's manager of operations in the Northwest.

It came after signing of a power production agreement between the Puget Sound Power and Light company and the Chelan County Public Utility district.

L.A. Doctor Says No. 1 Death Cause Can Be Corrected

CHICAGO — (AP) — A Los Angeles doctor said today that considerable medical evidence has come to light recently that thickening of the arteries—the No. 1 cause of death—can be avoided and possibly corrected.

Dr. Lester M. Morrison said he kept a group of heart sufferers on a low fat diet, supplemented by special drugs and that their death rate was only a third of those of an untreated group of sufferers.

"The former concept that atherosclerosis is the result of old age and the inevitable 'rusting out' of the arteries from wear and tear is now known to be in error," he said.

3 Factors Blamed

Writing in the Journal of the American Medical Association, he blamed thickening and degeneration of the arteries on three factors:

1. A diet high in fat and cholesterol.
2. A poor functioning liver that causes disturbances in metabolism.
3. Improper gland function involving the thyroid and sex hormones.

He and his co-workers treated a group of 230 coronary atherosclerosis patients for three years.

They were placed on a diet very low in fat and cholesterol. They were permitted to eat only two whole eggs a week but could have all the egg white they desired. Skimmed milk was substituted for whole milk and cream, rich cheeses, liver, brains, kidney, sweetbreads, pork and fat meats and fat fish, pies, rich cake and other fatty or oily foods were forbidden.

Two drugs—choleline and inositol—were given to the patients after meals. Those drugs apparently act on the liver, aiding it to restore normal metabolic function.

"It is literally true that many Americans are eating themselves to death," Morrison said.

Woman Nemesis Of Vice In Gary Runs For Mayor

GARY, Ind. — (AP) — A 41-year-old mother who two years ago helped chase gamblers out of Gary now has politicians in a tizzy. She is running for mayor.

Mrs. Hylda Mae Burton, a school teacher, is out to beat seven men in the May 8 primary race for the Democratic nomination.

Politicians in this politically tough city, third largest in Indiana, regard her as a "long shot." But they admit she has them guessing.

One reason is that she was a leader in a successful petticoat crusade against organized crime long before most housewives in other cities heard about the crime problem from Senator Kefauver via television.

Mrs. Burton is the wife of a fuel dealer and mother of a 10-year-old daughter.

Two years ago a group of Gary women organized the Women's citizens committee to war against gambling establishments, bookie joints and houses of prostitution.

They carried their fight to the governor. To dramatize their crusade they picketed known gambling establishments and forced a shakeup in the city police department.

Politicians give them credit for defeating a Lake county prosecutor in 1950 and bringing to light information which led to disbarment proceedings against his Gary deputy.

A Lake county grand jury, looking into what the WCC called an "unholy alliance between crime and politics," indicted the Mayor of neighboring Whiting, Ind. It also indicted three police executives and five accused gamblers.

Mrs. Burton, who has an organized backing in a political sense, got into the primary fight because, she says, the other candidates on either side offered little for good government.

Advertising Is an Investment Toward the Perpetual Growth of Profitable Business

THIS MAN DOESN'T BELIEVE IN ADVERTISING

... yet, he has just arisen from a well advertised metal bed that contained an advertised mattress, sheets, blankets and pillows. He is now removing an advertised brand of pajamas and is about to enter the bathroom, the fixtures of which have been advertised for more than a quarter of a century. He will soon use an advertised brand of soap and later pick up a shaving brush that is known the world over because it has been advertised. He will use a razor, shaving soap, massage cream, toilet water, tooth brush and paste, as well as a comb and brush which have seen the light of advertising before he puts on his well advertised clothes.

This same man will eat a well advertised brand of cereal, bacon, bread and coffee for his breakfast. And just before leaving his home, he will put on a well known and advertised brand of hat. He will step into the motor car which he purchased because its advertised "points" sold him, and upon entering his office he will light an advertised brand of cigar and sit down to his daily administrative duties amid advertised office furniture. His stenographer, secretary and office associates are all wearing clothes which were purchased because they were well advertised.

Upon his return home, Mr. Man finds a great deal of comfort in a nationally advertised chair and almost mechanically pulls the cord to an advertised brand of floor lamp. Soon he is called to dinner and must cross over well advertised rugs, and upon entering the dining room finds the table temptingly filled with many long-advertised food products.

After dinner he fills a substantially advertised pipe with advertised tobacco, plays with Junior with his advertised toys for thirty minutes while Mother and the girls are doing the advertised dishes in an advertised metal sink.

After the play period with the kids and a little family chat, it is likely this man will go in the garage and use his advertised brand of tools for an hour or so, at which time he re-enters the house and reads a newspaper filled with stimulating advertisements and finds there is a good movie advertised that the family must not miss seeing.

Upon their return home, the family makes a mad raid for snacks out of the refrigerator which he bought because the advertisement pointed out many economy features, plus a price which appealed to him and his entire family.

And not too far into the night, this man once more goes to bed and is reminded again that this darned contraption which cradles his back as if on a cloud was pretty well advertised.

Ho, hum . . . and he does not believe in advertising.
