Emergency Lumber Yard in Northwest Federal Plan

PORTLAND — (AP) — A lumber distribution yard, carrying an 11,000,000 board-foot stockpile, will be established shortly in the Pacific Northwest for emergency armed forces requirements in the Pacific. Col. Donald S. Burns, Portland district engineer, said the yards would be located in one of these areas: Columbia or Willamette river, Grays harbor or Puget sound. Bids will be opened about June 5, he said, on offers to provide the storage, water berthing and loading facilities and some rail and minor remanufacturing facilities. It will be the Northwest's first second stockpiling of lumber and the second on the Pacific coast. The first was established May 1 at Oakland, Calif., by the Portland district. The Oakland center is to maintain a level of 15,000,000 board feet. Unseasoned boards and dimension lumber of Northwest species will be the principal stored items, Col. Burns said. The purpose is to provide quickly the items for in emergency by forces in the Pacific.

The Umpqua river route to Reedport, Oregon, was originally surveyed for a railroad and was later abandoned, even though over a million dollars had been spent on a tunnel.
