Terms Announced By Indian Reds For Ending Terror

BOMBAY, India — (AP) — India's Communist party announced it is prepared to negotiate with the government about ending Red terrorism in Hyderabad state. The Communists, who boast between 80,000 and 100,000 members in India, laid down a set of conditions on which the campaign of lawlessness in the princely state would be halted. The Communists hold virtual control of Hyderabad's Telangana jungle, comprising the Warangal and Nalgonda districts. Thousands have been killed over the past five years in peasant uprisings which even the Indian army had been unable to suppress. Several thousand suspected terrorists have been placed in detention camps, but the peasants' fight against feudal landlordism has continued unabated.

Hyderabad hedged on joining India when that dominion became independent in 1947, but it acceded after Indian troops entered the state in September, 1948. Communist demands included: Lands forcibly seized by the peasants to remain in their possession; village administrations to be managed by elected local officials; withdrawal of the army and disbandment of home guard units; release of prisoners detained without trial; withdrawal of a ban on the Communist party and convening of a constituent assembly to decide on the future of the Nizam's (ruler) dynasty. The Communists have been issuing propaganda blasts for three years against the detention of 12 young Reds originally sentenced to death for killing four persons during a Communist assault in Hyderabad in 1948. Last month the sentences were commuted to life imprisonment. The statement repudiated a suggestion that the party was engaged in an attempt to overthrow the Indian government and declared the peasants' struggle began in 1946 when Hyderabad was under the British. The Indian government is gradually ending landlordism, but it is believed the Communist terms will be considered unacceptable and viewed as a mere maneuver for greater freedom of action.
