

Alleged Kidnaper Makes Second Try For New Trial

TACOMA — (AP) — One of the three persons convicted of the George Weyerhaeuser kidnaping in 1935 has made a new bid for freedom in U. S. district court here.

Harmon M. Waley, serving a 45-year sentence at Alcatraz, filed a motion for a new trial, asserting his confession to the kidnaping was caused by fear of the death penalty if he were found guilty by jury trial. The motion, mailed here by Waley from Alcatraz, contended the confession was involuntary and not valid as court evidence. He indicated he wishes to plead not guilty to the kidnaping charge.

Waley's wife, Margaret, was sentenced to 20 years imprisonment in the same case. A third defendant, William Dainard, also known as William Mahan, was sentenced to 60 years.

Kidnaping of young Weyerhaeuser, member of a Tacoma lumber family, occurred May 24, 1935 as he was walking near Annie Wright seminary.

The Waleys and Dainard were convicted of transporting the boy to a hideout in Blanchard and Spirit Lake, Idaho. Weyerhaeuser was freed unharmed after his family paid $200,000 ransom. Waley filed a similar motion in 1949 which was denied.

Heroic GI Earns 3 Decorations In First Battle

U. S. 7TH DIVISION, Korea — (AP)—It was May 2 and his first day under fire. His company was in a bitter fight.

Suddenly a bullet whizzed by and hit another GI standing nearby. He rushed over to the fallen soldier and started bandaging the wound. Then a Chinese grenade landed only a foot away.

The tall blond soldier calmly picked it up and was about to throw it. But it exploded, mangling his right arm.

A few seconds later a mortar fragment caught him in the back. That was the first day in combat for Pvt. Kenneth W. Sells of Middlesboro, Ky. He was a military policeman who had volunteered for duty with a rifle company. Only five days before he had been assigned to company K of the 17th infantry regiment.

And on that first day he earned his combat infantryman's badge, the purple heart, and a recommendation for the Congressional Medal of Honor.

They still talk about it. How he walked down the hill from the battle, cradling his bloody right arm.

How, when someone offered a cigarette, he smiled and said, "Thanks, I've got my own."

How, when the grenade went off, all he said was, "I'm hit."

His buddies will tell you about Sells.

"He saved my life," said PFC. Reuben Kemp of Burlington, Vt. "That guy sure has guts."

"Some guys holler like mad for a stretcher when they get a little scratch," said Matthew Evans of Establine, Tex. "But not Sells. He just got up and asked which way was the way to the aid station."

Narcotics Orgies Shock Senate Investigators

BALTIMORE — (AP) — Shocked senate crime investigators were told about narcotics parties in Baltimore attended by as many as 40 men and women dope addicts at a time.

The first hand reports were revealed when the investigators questioned 10 inmates of the Maryland reformatory for women in nearby Jessup.

Senator O'Connor (D-Md), committee chairman, said he and two assistants were told about parties in private homes, when anywhere from 15 to 40 dope fiends gathered.

The witnesses said heroin, a quick-acting, habit-forming drug, was the most frequent narcotics used at the parties.

A reformatory official said the testimony literally "took their (the investigators') breath away."

SLEEPTIME TALES: KRNR's popular children's program that stars Uncle Bob and Torrence each evening at 7 o'clock has a new library. The records that Uncle Bob will spin have been pre-tested in schools and homes, and age-graded educationally in a way that gratifies parents, teachers and critics, and yet pleases the children themselves. For many years there has been a recognition of the need for songs and stories on records that appeal to different age groups, but very little has been done about it. Bob McCarl in the past has been very discriminating in his choice of songs and records for the program — he checked over every record before airing it, and oftentimes used his own children as a
