Small-Fry's Herd Trout After Break

ENTIAT, Wash. — (AP) — Ever hear of "small-fry" "fishpokes" who herd trout. This town had 'em Friday.
Entiat valley kids staged their fish roundup at a nearly dry millpond, herding thousands of trout through ankle deep mud to shallow water where they were scooped up with buckets.
It was a field day the like of which most anglers see only in their dreams.
The stage was set for the OPS-less bonanza when the state Game department planted 40,000 fish this week in the Harris company mill pond on the Entiat river. Most of them were of legal size.
Thursday night the pond's dam broke. Company officials said the barrier was undermined by the fast-running river.
