Compton Believes UMT Is Overdue

PULLMAN, Wash. — (AP) — Dr. Karl Compton, recently named by President Truman to a five-man military-civilian commission on universal military training said Saturday that "Universal Military Training should have been started five years ago. If it had been put into effect earlier we would be in much better shape now."

Dr. Compton, brother of Washington state college President Wilton Compton, and chairman of the board of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was in Pullman for the wedding of his niece, Helen Case Compton.

He said, "I don't believe UMT is justified in education or character building—it is only justified because of the potential military situation."

Dr. Compton indicated that UMT would give some reduction in freshman college enrollment temporarily for a year or two. However, he said, after that time the colleges should not be affected.

Dominican Priest Hears Cry Of Poor And Starving

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK — (AP) — "Anybody can be a saint once in his lifetime," said the Rev. Anthony G. McCabe, "but it is the habit that counts."

And then the big, rugged 42-year-old Dominican priest said another thing, rather gently:

"Too many people hear only the noise of their own footsteps in this world, and cannot hear the cries of the starving."

Father McCabe, a former army chaplain who was orphaned before he was a year old, has been haunted by those cries all his life.

He now heads the Mission of Blessed Martin De Porres, a school for poverty-stricken Negro children in Columbia, S. C. Every few months he hitch-hikes to New York with a big smile on his face—and his big hand held out for help to keep his mission going.

And he gets it, too.

"Many of the contributors are Protestant and Jewish friends," he said, and laughed. "One of my Jewish friends raised funds by making a personal appeal to a Protestant congregation."

Father McCabe lost both his mother and father in a southern Illinois coal mine explosion.

"My mother had gone down into the mine to take my father his lunch," he explained.

He lived in an Alton, Ill., orphanage until the age of seven and then he was adopted by a farmer. The chance reading of a religious magazine decided him as a boy to embrace the Dominican order, whose priests forswear all worldly possessions and take rigorous vows of chastity, poverty and obedience.

Father McCabe went to the Pacific with the 165th regiment during the last World war. During the battle for Makin he buried 30 American dead.

He was awarded a Purple Heart after his jeep was blown up by a land mine on Saipan, and he was invalided home. The men lost in the island fighting still are close to his heart.

"If the lesson of sacrifice they taught us has been learned," he said soberly, "It is not their fault. I pray for them every day."

He has one amusing memory of those sad days. Once his Catholic boys made him a four-foot long rosary of seashells. Some Protestant and Jewish soldiers in the regiment immediately countered by making the chaplain an eight-foot seashell rosary.

The priest took over his mission, a dilapidated old mansion in the heart of the city's Negro district, in the summer of 1947. The first thing he did was to repair the ceiling—and part of it fell down on him. An alarmed nun ran to his aid.

"It looks like the pastor is plastered," said Father McCabe, who has the big man's love for small puns.

Today the mission school has 125 pupils, ranging from 6 to 17 years old, many of whom have to be fed and clothed as well as educated.

At first there was considerable prejudice against us, among both Negroes and white people," said Father McCabe. "They even threw garbage in our yard."

"But the prejudice is dying out. We are there to help—not to proselytize. There are children of many faiths in the mission, and less than a third are Catholics."

"As long as they are poor—that is their calling card. We never ask who they are, or what they are."

War and peace have given Father McCabe a three-word formula which he feels will answer most of the world's problems:

"Charity and tolerance."

Some of the earth's largest creatures — whales — live on some of its smallest forms of life — plankton.

Wills' Playboys Slate Dance Here

BOB WILLS

Bob Wills and his "Texas Playboys" will play for a dance Sunday, July 8, at the Melody Mountain Barn as one of the special events of the season.

Featured in the show will be yodeler Romona Reed, Jack Lloyd and a vocal quartet.

Born and raised in Texas, Wills first became interested in violin playing at the age of 10. He soon developed a western band and became the pride of Tulsa, Okla., where he broadcast for more than 10 years.

Between film, radio and theater engagements, Wills has been busy writing songs. His "San Antonio Rose," recorded by Columbia, has gone over the three and a half million mark in sales.

One folio of his western melodies was published by the Irving Berlin company and another soon hit the stands. It included his "My Confession," "I Wonder If You Feel the Way I Do," "Spanish Two Step" and "Steel Guitar Rag." The last named is a popular request number. Wills has one success formula: "Nothing fancy or forced."
