Wealthy American Dog Bites Back At Her Traducers in Red Moscow

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK — (AP) — I have just interviewed the richest animal in the world — Toby, a dog multi-millionaire that Moscow is mad at.

Her first snarling observation was: "If the Marxists won't let a dog have his day, what are they? Just a bunch of fat cats in my opinion."

Her anger was directed at radio Moscow.

Nobody had ever heard of Toby — either in Soviet Russia or in America — until this week. Radio Moscow mentioned her in a propaganda broadcast for Russians who like capitalistic fairy tales about the United States.

Describing how fattened, hungry American children searched for something to eat "in the rubbish" on Fifth avenue, radio Moscow said:

"Here they look with envy at one of the richest quarters, that of the millionaires. Here is a richly decorated house, the home of the little dog Toby, whose mistress, a mad American woman, left it $75,000,000.

The dog sleeps on a golden bed; it is attended by a staff of 45 servants and six lawyers."

Reality Discovered

Naturally at first I thought Toby was just a figment of some Soviet broadcaster's imagination. But American reporters are thorough. So I decided to check.

Block by block I worked my way up Fifth Avenue knocking at rich men's doors and asking, "Is Toby in?" I won't mention some of the answers I received. But at one great iron gate, a butler unexpectedly said, "yes, come in."

He led me into a vast ornate drawing room. Seated in a rare antique french chair and wearing a luxurious velvet cloak was a middle-aged lady dog. There was an air of quiet good breeding about her as she studied the minutes of the last meeting of the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

It was Toby herself. Lowering her lorgnette, she extended a gloved paw and growled graciously: "Shake, man. What can I do for you?"

I showed her the text of the Radio Moscow broadcast and she flew into a rage.

"Typical Russian propaganda!" she snapped. "Lies and half-truths. Escape From Russia."

"I am worth $100,000,000 — not $75,000,000. It wasn't left me by a mad mistress, but by a happy mistress. She was happy to get out of Russia. We were there together. She had become friendly with a prominent Soviet general, and he gave her $50,000,000 in diamonds. Why, I don't know. People are people."

Toby explained that after the general disappeared suddenly she and her mistress escaped with the diamonds to America.

"Since the death of my mistress I have managed to double my fortune by astute investments," she said. "I put my money in sound stocks—things like dog food and whisky."

Commenting on other inaccuracies in the Radio Moscow broadcast, Toby said: "I'm not attended by 45 servants and six lawyers. They've got it backward. I have six servants and 45 lawyers — and I need 45 lawyers the way the income tax fellows hound me."

She led me into her bedroom. "Do you see any golden bed here?" she asked. "I sleep on
