CAN BE DANGEROUS

Warning Issued Against Use Of New Garden Insecticides

A warning against careless use of two new garden insecticides — tetraethyl pyrophosphate and parathion — was issued Tuesday by the Douglas county health department.

Dr. E. J. Wainscott, county health officer, said studies just announced by the industrial hygiene section of the state board of health show that either of these organic phosphate insecticides now on the market for home use, can produce serious illness or death in humans.

"Careless handling of the concentrated forms of the insecticides is particularly dangerous," Dr. Wainscott said, "but even the dust or mixtures which have been diluted for use contain poison in concentrations which are highly toxic to man if improperly used."

Absorbed Through Skin

He emphasized that the materials may be absorbed through the skin, mucous membranes or the eyes, by inhalation, and by swallowing. They act as nerve poisons and produce symptoms of headache, excessive sweating, giddiness, blurred vision, weakness, nausea, cramps, diarrhea, and discomfort in the chest.

Dr. Wainscott warned that persons showing these symptoms should be removed from exposure to the insecticides, and should consult a physician immediately.

He pointed out that one manufacturer prints the following warning in small type on the bottle: "DANGER: Warning: Extremely hazardous, if swallowed, inhaled or absorbed through skin or eyes. It is rapidly absorbed through the skin. Avoid all skin contact with the concentrated spray and prolonged skin contact with the diluted spray. Avoid inhalation of spray mist by wearing a mask or respirator approved by the U. S. Bureau of Mines. Wear protective clothing and goggles. Operators should remove gloves or other protective garments and wash with soap and water before eating and after work. Persons susceptible to this product should be removed from the job at the first sign of overexposure indicated by nausea, tightness in chest or painful vision."

Appropriations Cut Reversed, Say Senators

WASHINGTON — (AP)—Informed senators said today that $25,000,000 which Congress ordered President Truman to cut back in last year's farm program has sprouted anew in the billion-dollar agricultural appropriation bill for fiscal 1952.

The lawmakers, who asked that they not be identified by name, told a reporter the House probably passed the bill without knowing that it, in effect, reversed last year's order.
