

Capitanos Fall To Tri-City Nine

By The Associated Press

The Tri-City Braves, a team that isn't going anywhere in the Western International league, put the brakes on the pennant aspirations of the Vancouver Capitanos last night in the only regularly scheduled game of the usual "off" Monday.

The six-place Braves opened their series at Vancouver with a 4-2 victory to drop the Caps two games behind the idle Spokane Indians. The gap equals the largest between the two contenders since Spokane forged to the front in July, slumped back and then overtook Vancouver again last week.

Tri-City's starting pitcher, Joe Nicholas, was carried from the field in the third inning when he was hit by a line drive from the bat of his opposing moundman, Pete Hernandez. X-rays were to be taken of Nicholas' injured ankle.

In two exhibition games, the Portland Beavers of the Pacific Coast league defeated their WIL farm club at Victoria, 9-4, and Salem shut out Eugene of the Far West league, 7-0.

Victoria outthrew the Beavers, 11-8, but contributed to its own downfall with a rash of walks and three errors. Salem Manager Hugh Luby led his club to victory with four singles in four trips.

A full slate is on tap tonight with Tri-City at Vancouver, Yakima at Victoria, Tacoma at Salem and Wenatchee at Spokane.

Work, Not Red-Tape Worries, is Aim Of Youthful Farming Organizations

By PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Two government agencies are now running clubs for farm youngsters. One is the well-known 4-H club movement, run by the extension service of the Department of Agriculture. The other is FFA — the Future Farmers of America, whose officers are now meeting in Washington. It is run by the agricultural education service of the office of education, the federal security agency.

While the Washington executive heads of the two organizations insist they are not rivals, there is a certain duplication of effort. Sen. George D. Aiken of Vermont has a bill before Congress to take Future Farmers and the agricultural vocational education program out of Federal Security Agency and put in Department of Agriculture, where it would seem to belong.

Congress has so many pressing problems on its hands, however, that the Aiken bill has a small chance of consideration this year. Federal government employees who manage the FFA program say they don't care what agency or department they operate from, just so they're permitted to keep on with their work.

FFA is the younger, smaller and more exclusive of the two organizations. It now has 340,000 members in 7900 local chapters. They are in every state except Rhode Island, but the biggest memberships are in the southern states, from Texas with 32,000 to North Carolina with 20,000.

The 4-H club movement is much broader and bigger. It takes in some two million farm youngsters, both boys and girls, between the ages of 10 and 21. There are 93,000 4-H club locals in every county of every state. They have 185,000 local volunteer leaders and 730,000 assistant county agents who work on 4-H club organization full time.

HERE'S WHERE YOUR MONEY GOES—The farmer got an average of 49 cents of each dollar you spent for farm food products in May, this year. The other 51 cents went to pay marketing agencies (middlemen) in the chain from the farm to your kitchen. The Newschart above, based on data from the U. S. Department of Agriculture, shows the farmer's take and that of the middlemen for various types of foods. The 49-cent figure for May represents a decline of two cents—almost four per cent—below the 51 cents of the food dollar the farmer was getting in April. The reason: farm prices declined while middleman's costs and charges went up.

ONE FOR THE CHEMISTS—This three-cent stamp will commemorate the 75th anniversary of the American Chemical Society. The stamp will be placed on first day sale at New York City on Sept. 4, 1951.

4-H and FFA at the same time. As a matter of fact, says Gertrude Warren, organization secretary for 4-H work in the Department of Agriculture, many farm boys work on 4-H projects before they get into Future Farmers, and they return to 4-H work after they get out of vocational high school.

What the federal government contributes to these two farm youth organizations is impossible to determine. The figures are buried in the books of the larger Department of Agriculture extension service and the federal security agency's agricultural education service.

Agricultural extension service and agricultural education service grants are made to the states on a matching basis. The states in turn parcel out the money to counties and local communities for all manner of activities. So every dollar gets multiplied two or three times before it's spent.

Plans for this year's convention, to be held in Kansas City in October, were made at the meeting of officers in Washington this week. Four-H has an annual encampment in Washington in June, bringing two prize-winning boys and girls from each state.

Future Farmers was organized in 1928. It was originally administered by a federal board of vocational education, made up of the secretaries of agriculture, interior and commerce, plus a few civilians. The board was abolished ten years later and the administration shifted to the office of education in the Department of Interior.

Under President Roosevelt, the office of education was shifted to the federal security agency. And if the Aiken bill goes through, administration will go to the Department of Agriculture. This is a fair idea of how bureaus get kicked around in succeeding reorganization plans.

BRANCE IMPROVES
BROOKLYN — (AP) — A quick look at the records show how much Ralph Brance has improved this season. Last year, when he had a 7-9 mark, he served up a home run ball every six innings. This season, while compiling a 9-3 record, he has given up one homer every 30 innings.

"And the reason for this," explains Brooklyn Manager Charlie Dressen, "is that he's given up that big curve and is getting them out with the slider."

GENUINE 'OLD COW HAND'
MILAN, Tenn. — (AP) — How old must a cowboy be before he is too old to ride and rope? It must be more than 71, because John K. Skinner is still riding "the range" out here in west Tennessee. Skinner is a real cowpuncher, mind you, with bowed legs and boots and spurs. And he says he keeps all six of his horses "rode down" and could use six more.

The old cowhand punches cattle on the land leased by the Dogle Cattle Co. of Dexter, N. M., from the Milan Arsenal reservation near here. He has 1,050 head of cattle and 650 calves to look after.

Old John says he's been a cowboy since he ran away from school back in Oklahoma when he was 14. That's 37 years of riding horses and chasing doggies, and he still likes it.

Washington State College Poses Loyalty Queries

SPOKANE — (AP) — Washington State college has announced it has set up a two-item questionnaire that must be answered by all new applicants for teaching jobs.

'DOESN'T NEED IT' — Gifford Phillips (above) of Denver, Colo., turned down an inheritance of $291,500 from the estate of his mother, Mrs. Alice O. Johnson. He gave up the money in favor of his stepfather and stepbrother. "He simply didn't need it. He has plenty," a close friend explained.

The board of regents said the plan is required under terms of the state's 1951 anti-subversives act. The questionnaire, drawn up on a "temporary basis," will ask:

1. Have you ever been a member of a subversive organization?
2. To the best of your knowledge and belief have you ever been dismissed for alleged subversive activities?

At the same time, the regents called on the other state schools and Attorney General Smith Troy to join with WSC in drawing up a permanent set of loyalty questions. Since 1931, all college instructors in the state have been required to sign an oath swearing allegiance to the United States. All present employees must sign declarations that they have read the laws on subversive activities and are not violating them.

The Rev. Charles E. McAllister, a member of the WSC board, suggested a state committee from the higher educational institutions should draft a clear and precise definition of a subversive activity. The anti-subversives law passed by the 1951 legislature requires state institutions to ascertain the loyalty of their employees.

300 MOTHERS FOR ORPHANS
LEWISTOWN, N. Y. — (AP) — The 120 boys of far-away St. Anthony's orphanage in famine ridden India aren't orphans any more — they now have 300 friendly foster-mothers.

Three hundred housewives, members of the Rosary Confraternity of St. Bernard's Roman Catholic church in this postwar suburban community, "adopted" the youngsters in response to an appeal for aid from the director of the orphanage in Alleppey, India. Each housewife will buy an extra package of food on her weekly shopping tour. The food will be collected and shipped to the orphanage once a month.
