Washington State Given New Fund; Tax Hikes Due

OLYMPIA — (AP) — An omnibus appropriations bill providing $880,000 for past, present and future state checks was passed by the legislature Tuesday and signed into law by Governor Langlie.

The budget bill, adopted after nearly a week of stormy debate, restored state funds cut off eight days ago when the supreme court ruled that a combination appropriations-tax bill passed at the special legislative session in April was illegal.

A bipartisan committee from the Senate and the House arranged to meet with Langlie today to study various tax proposals. Observers said they were certain to include an increase in the sales and business and occupation taxes; extension of the business and occupation tax for farmers; a soft drink tax; increasing of the levy on sale of liquor by the drink, and "nuisance" taxes.

Oakland Schools' Setup To Change

Oakland schools will be reorganized on the 6-6 plan this year with the recent construction of a new four-room addition to the high school building, according to M. L. Gilbreath, Oakland superintendent.

The high school building will house the upper six grades.

Both the elementary and high school are now fully staffed. Ten new teachers will greet students, six of them replacements, plus four additional ones.

The steady school growth made it necessary to add the four instructors to meet standardization requirements, Gilbreath said.

Enrollment will increase by about 50 students, Gilbreath estimated. Pre-school health clinic and first grade enrollment will be held for elementary children on Friday, Sept. 7 between 9 a.m. and noon, in the grade school building. Parents are asked to accompany their children to the clinic. Birth certificates are also necessary.

Pre-registration for high school students new to the district will be held in the high school office Thursday, Sept. 6 between 1 and 8 p.m.

Cloud Seeding Spurs Rain In Hubbard Creek Area

moving from the coast producing several natural showers Tuesday. But the cloud seeding operations achieved "greater intensity" in the Hubbard creek fire area, the fliers said.

The formula used to seed the clouds Tuesday is a secret—"It has never been published," Brandau said. The fliers also carried dry ice on their flight but did not use it.

The flight was made at 13,000 feet, above most cloud formations. Pierce reported some trouble with icing conditions at that altitude.

The two fliers have been the center of a "rainmaking" controversy in Jackson county for the past two years.

A number of dry-land farmers in the Rogue valley have accused them of preventing natural rainfall from falling in the valley through their hail-breaking work. Hail Prevention Planned.

The pilots have been contracted by the Rogue River Valley Traffic association, a fruit growers organization, to prevent the precipitation of hail, which is disastrous to the fruit. They do this through introducing material into the hail-forming thunderheads which will help in the formation of snow rather than hail. The snow falls as rain.

But, the farmers say, in preventing hail from falling, the fliers also prevent precipitation of any kind. The farmers assert the pilots disperse the clouds, thereby preventing the precipitation of badly-needed rainfall.

Brandau and Pierce branded the idea as a "popular misconception," and denied their flights in Jackson county disperse cloud formations.

Although Jackson county farmers have accused the fliers of helping to cause a drought in Jackson county this summer, the pilots report they have not made a cloud seeding flight since May 13.

First Graders Physicals Top Number In 1950

Registration of Roseburg first graders for physical examinations has been heavier than expected, with about 40 more than last year showing up, reports Paul Elliott, superintendent of city schools.

If the same number of children register after school starts as did last year—about 100—the total first-grade enrollment will be approximately 320, he said. Plans had been made to expand facilities to accommodate 300.

Pre-registration is slated Thursday morning for all first graders in the four elementary schools in Roseburg school district 4, according to Elliott.

Parents should bring their child's birth certificate for the pre-registration. Hours are from 9 a.m. to noon.

First graders who haven't taken the physical examination offered by the school clinics must obtain it from a private physician and present the exam report, with the birth certificate, at the pre-registration or on the first day of school.

No birth certificate is required for seventh graders.

Immunization clinics will also be held in the schools but the date has not been set. Checks on eyesight will be made within the first six weeks, Elliott said.

The lunch program will start on the first day of school with prices the same as last year—25 cents for elementary and 30 cents for high school children per meal.

Because of overcrowded conditions, two of the four sections of fourth grade at Riverside school will have to attend classes at Eden bower school, said Elliott. In general, those children living west of Mulholland drive will attend Edenbower and one full section will probably have to be transported via bus.

Security Agent Dated

Social security field representative C. Fenton Ford will be in the Roseburg city hall council chamber next Tuesday, Sept. 4 between 8:30 a.m. and noon.
