

Wars Only Renew Chaos Instead Of Creating Order, History Shows

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK — (AP) — War is for people who don't know any better — or who can't help themselves. It interrupts or destroys the chief pleasure of this world — which is to live happily.

War is the last resort of a nation that tells another nation it must have its way, by force if necessary.

The fact it also says its goal is peace is confusing. By peace it means, "I want my own way and my own system."

Wars, born of ambition or principle, have tended to end in the same way: they renew chaos instead of achieving order.

All leaders, dictatorial or democratic, throughout history have sent millions of men to bloody death on strange battlefields to win a victory by force of arms that can only be temporary.

How can war achieve permanency when it is most often merely a means to an end?

How can war achieve permanency when it is most often merely hate against the foreigner?

Rome finally killed Carthage, and then Rome sickened and died. Why? She couldn't police her own great system.

The Romans spread a colossal net of awe for order that still afflicts us, their conquerors, after the barbarian outbreaks of these many centuries. The passion for a pattern that the Romans set still endures.

And one who has a hopeful eye about the march of history cannot feel that the passage of 20 centuries has been less than a step toward a unified world. Hope is better than a timetable.

Napoleon and Hitler tried to achieve world unity by the direct assault of power. So had Alexander the Great. The British, a small people with a great mind, worked by the twin channels of prestige and strategic strength toward the same goal.

Now America vs. Russia

The muscle of America rules the world today except for the untested might of Russia. Not only the muscle of America but its dreams. Dreams of a world in which what happens to the world in our time depends on whether America and Russia bump hearts and heads in battle.

Will they?

They sometime and somehow may probably have to do so, but I am optimistic enough to believe it won't be tomorrow.

As the world has shrunk, great nations have tended to fight each other just as small nations in Europe once could afford the luxury of enmity expressed in combat. But this irresponsibility is dying.

Sometime some nation in the long story of mankind must pledge its money and men and minerals underground to something finer than either future profit or boyish restlessness — the goal of eternal peace.

Men and nations often reach for power because they are neurotic. To control something else becomes

Penalty For Kidnapping Death For Animal, Man

WALLACE, Idaho — (AP) — Animal or man the penalty for kidnapping is death.

And north Idaho hunters are out for blood in their search for a cougar that tried to kidnap a two-year-old child.

Sam Peterson of Wallace said his small daughter, Jane, was carried 200 yards by a large cat that picked the girl up with its teeth in the child's sweater.

The animal dropped the child when Mrs. Peterson and her two sons ran after it screaming. After letting go of the little girl, the big cat stopped, snarled for a moment, and then disappeared in the brush.

Little Jane suffered only scratches about the face.

The incident occurred at a mining camp near Wallace.

Results Good In Coast TV Hookup

NEW YORK — (AP) — The first coast-to-coast telecast in history — President Truman's speech in San Francisco Tuesday night — was received here with quality.

Spokesmen for all four network equal to that of local telecasts. Companies — American Broadcasting system, Columbia Broadcasting system, Dumont and the National Broadcasting company — were enthusiastic about the reception at this end of the 3,000-mile hook-up.

The excellent reception probably gave easterners a better view of Mr. Truman than could be obtained in the rear seats of the war memorial opera house, where the resident spoke to the opening session of the Japanese peace treaty conference.

NBC estimated that 20,000,000 watched this first transcontinental video broadcast. Other estimates were higher with the telecast beamed to stations in 54 cities.

Chance Of Left-Wing Murder Of Author Seen

FLEMINGTON, N. J. — (AP) — Local authorities listed the death of Louis Adamic, writer and fighter for minority tolerance, as suicide but invited the FBI to probe the possibility of left-wing murder.

The 52-year-old Yugoslav-born author who recently found Marshal Tito more to his liking than Russia's Stalin was found in his burning farmhouse in nearby Millford with a bullet in his head and a rifle across his knees.

Immature Groom Taken By Lady 59 Years Later

AXMINSTER, England — (AP) — fifty-nine years ago William Arnold asked Elizabeth Drew: "Will you marry me?"

At a wedding ceremony in the Methodist chapel here Tuesday she finally said, "I will."

When William first popped the question in 1892 he was 21 and Elizabeth was 27.

"You're too young for me," she said.

William married another woman and fathered nine children. Last year his wife died. Last May, at the age of 80, he asked Elizabeth again. And Elizabeth, now an 86-year-old spinster, accepted.

Officers Retired Too Early, Claim

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Sharply criticizing the "premature retirement of still useful officers," Rep. Norblad (R-Ore.) said he will seek to stop it.

He proposed to introduce legislation to bar the retirement of career officers in the defense establishment before they reach 62 years of age.

The only exception would be for physical disability.

"Career officers in all branches of the service have been retiring many years before reaching the age of 62," the congressman said in a statement. "This at a time when the Defense department is still calling up reserve officers from civilian life."

"It seems evident to me that since the great majority of them have received their education from taxpayer - supported academies that they should give to the country the benefit and value of their education and experience until reaching a proper age for retirement."

He cited as the most recent examples, the retirement recently of Lt. Gen. Elwood R. Quesada and Lt. Gen. Richard E. Nugent, both of the air forces — "neither of whom has yet become 50 years of age."

Federal Money Grants Assailed

WASHINGTON — (AP) — An official of the U. S. chamber of commerce assailed federal money grants of the states as "one of the most insidious causes of swollen government budgets."

Dr. George Cline Smith told the Governmental Research association that "one of the great delusions of our time" is "the idea that federal money can work magic."

Federal grants usually carry an obligation that states getting them put up an equal sum of money. This "matching" of federal grants, said Smith in a prepared statement, "encourages irresponsible spending by states which are afraid of losing Washington hand-outs."

The Research association, holding its 37th annual conference here, is composed of men active in citizen research into local, state and federal government.
