Success For TV Comedians Is Analyzed

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD — (AP) — What does it take for a comedian to succeed on television?

This is a question which has caused booming business for the ulcer specialists of New York and Hollywood. Every established comedian and all hopeful ones have wrestled with this problem. Some have succeeded in conquering the new medium and others — alas — have been conquered by it.

I discussed the subject with two young but well qualified men. One is Roger Price, formerly a gag writer for Bob Hope and now a comic in his own right and author of the humorous book, "In One Head and Out the Other." The other is Leonard Stern, writer for Abbott and Costello and Milton Berle. Both are now featured on a new CBS TV and radio show, "How To," a satire on panel shows.

These two analysts offered four factors which successful TV comedians need:

Likable Personality

1. A likable personality. "You can't cover up in TV. If a guy is a jerk, the TV screen shows him as a jerk, and all the makeup and writing and cutting won't help a bit."

2. A 29-week try-out. "That's the normal TV season and a comic needs that much time to correct his mistakes and develop his format. Also, habit plays a big role in gaining an audience. If you're on long enough, the viewers develop the habit of looking at you."

3. Plenty of material. "This new medium swallows material like a whale eating sardines. Many a comic has failed on TV because he had been living for years off an hour's night club routine."

4. A fair-sized I.Q. "Television requires not only talent but memory as well. Many a performer who has been tied to a radio script for 20 years can't do an hour TV show by memory."

Price and Stern went on to classify the various types of comedians who have succeeded on TV:

Eccentric Types

1. Eccentric personalities. These are comics whose very nature make them funny. The most notable are Jimmy Durante, Ed Wynn and Dagmar, all of whose attributes are well known and outstanding.

2. Specialty or tour de force comics. They can assume a variety of characters in different sketches and generally are as good as their material. Examples: Sid Caesar, Imogene Coca, Jackie Gleason.

3. Emcees. These are the masters of timing and pacing who can do enough singing, dancing, acting and cutting up to get into every act. Examples: Milton Berle, Eddie Cantor.

4. Talking comics. These fellows, such as Arthur Godfrey, Don McNeill and Dave Garroway, get laughs through their own easy-going, almost shy personalities.

5. Acting comics. Such examples as Alan Young and Jack Carson assume characters which are apart from their own personalities. They often take the Chaplinesque form of the abused "little man."

Use Situation

6. Situation comics. Best examples are Burns and Allen, whose comedy arises from the plot situation. This is generally the eas-

IN TITLE QUEST — Here are six misses from Western states and Hawaii entered in the annual Miss America pageant at Atlantic City, N. J. From left, are: Claire Heen, "Miss Hawaii," of Honolulu; Donna Sellers, "Miss Nevada," of Reno; Colleen Hutchins, "Miss Utah," of Salt Lake City; Patricia Lehman, "Miss California," of Sacramento; Bobby Simmons, "Miss Oklahoma," of Oklahoma City, and Darlene Shaffer, "Miss Washington," of Seattle.

Beaver. While here they all went to Crater and Diamond lakes.

Mr. and Mrs. George Binder and son, Ray, spent the Labor day holidays visiting Mr. and Mrs. Odum L. Ford at Brookings.

Mrs. Olive Homme recently sold her 14-unit apartment house in Sutherlin to Mrs. Pauline J. Kissinger in Roseburg.

Mr. and Mrs. William Cox and children, Billy, Sharon, and Michael, are moving this weekend to Rio Del, Calif. Mr. Cox has spent the summer months hauling at Fortuna, Calif., which is six miles from Rio Del.

City Firemen Assisted By DFPA Personnel

Roseburg city firemen were assisted in extinguishing a grass fire at Kelly's corner by the Douglas Forest Protective association Wednesday afternoon, reports Fire Chief William E. Mills.

The fire was started on the property of Ray Pack by sparks from a trash burner.

A fire that burned through grass and snags at East Sixth St. on the property of Kenneth Ford was put out at 10 p.m. Wednesday. There was no damage.

The Julian Alps are in north-western Yugoslavia.
