Nylon At Home Offers Strength, Beauty, Ease

That magical fabric, nylon, has entered your home to become an exciting part of your modern-day ease of living.

Inherently strong and durable, nylon yarn provides home decorating fabrics that withstand hard treatment and drastically reduce the need of costly replacements.

Nylon can be utilized for almost everything in your living room. Draperies, window curtains, upholstery, carpeting and lamp shades, all available in a wide array of decor - matching nylon weaves.

Press Cloth
Nylon press cloth offers an interesting texture for draperies. Made with a mixture of spun and continuous filament yarns, this plain weave has a slightly fuzzy surface, somewhat similar to antique satin and is available in a variety of scenic and floral prints. There are also fine nylon satins and organdine damasks to be had for drapery use.

Design patterns in bold textured relief and plain backgrounds are now on hand in nylon carpeting, shown in a wide selection of room blending tones, such as green, rose, beige, geranium and blue.

Velvoo Upholstery
All-nylon velvet for upholstery, combines practical qualities with a luxuriant appearance. It has superior resistance to wrinkling and crushing, and tests show that water runs off its surface.

Also new for upholstery fabrics is a spun nylon frieze weave in a plain gros point effect for sectional modern sofa units and the same fabric with a patterned scroll in self color for traditional sofas.

Extensive use is also being made, decorators report, of nylon slipcovers. Homemakers find the slipcovers simple to wash, for ex-

Rugged Styles Look Nice Too

A completely new collection of strictly functional clothes set for efficiency yet completely feminine, is on hand this fall for busy housewives and their equally industrious sisters in defense plants.

Outfits made of sturdy denim and cotton, though without frills and flounces, are cut for a trim, efficient look that's definitely flattering.

All-in-one wrap-around dresses with brief cap sleeves need only to be buttoned at the neck and tied in front. Mammoth side pockets are large enough to stow away garden gear or household helpers.

Designed for "Renee the Riveter" as well as the housewife, are the sturdier outfits of boxy and rib fit denim jackets to top tape, even after youngsters smudge them.

Nylon taffeta used for lampshades and drapery linings is still another way to promise extra long wear to your living room furnishings.

ered denim slacks, adjustable wrap skirts, pedal pushers or cuittes.

Visor caps, some with snoods, keep tresses where they belong. And most of these clothes are non-shrinking, rip proof, dirt resistant and designed to fit all figures as well as all jobs.

Crinoline Fills Full Skirt Need

Gals can be happy these days that they have crinoline to bell out their new full skirts. Back in 1840 the tremendous skirts were supported by as many as seven heavy petticoats. These were lined up in a very specific order, and in winter, petticoat number two had to be of flannel "to protect them from the elements." Since flannel was not very exciting the ladies of the day boosted their morale by making that petticoat of a brilliant color which is perhaps the source of the vivid petticoat we see under our double skirts this year.

WARREN STAFFORD FLEECE coat styled by Metz is tried on by Janis Johnson with the assistance of Valerie Sparks, who is wearing a Mary Muffet Kelly jersey. Janis is wearing a Bonnie Briar cashmere Judy Jr. plaid pleated skirt with separate wide belt. These garments are carried by Luverne's Dress Shop in Roseburg.

Casual Wear
Goes Natural

Many of the key trends begun last fall in men's sportswear are carried forward and are now completely developed into smart new-looking designs in the fall lines of 1951, according to a prediction by The Wool Bureau.

Sport jackets feature slim, natural silhouette lines, with narrower shoulders and reduced padding. Grey and brown are predominant as sport jacket colors, with subdued plaids, checks and stripes popular.

Extremes continue to be "out." While an emphasis on patch pockets is much in evidence. The tweed cap, high in popularity among the college and young men's groups, is expected to enjoy continued and growing interest, with new variations in styles and shapes to be introduced. Among felt hats for sports wear, Tyrol models will enjoy another year of favor.

Tattersall vests, from many all-wool tweed fabrics, will be in step with the general return to popularity of tweeds. In almost every case, the all-wool tweed fabrics being offered for fall are lighter in weight and softer in texture than ever before.

IRON CAREFULLY

When ironing a nylon fabric use a moderately hot iron. If it has a heat control, set it to "nylon" or "rayon." Be careful not to get it extremely hot or the nylon may become sticky.
