Jackson County Bonds Launched Southern Oregon Unit Of Pacific Highway In 1914

By RALPH WATSON
Oregon Highway Commission
Public Relations Consultant

It was away back in the year "3 B.C." (before commission) that the first officially dug shovel-full of dirt in the construction of the Oregon highway system was turned up south of Ashland by Sam Hill, son-in-law of J. J. Hill of railroad construction fame. Hill, the younger, had a dream of fathering a highway grid across the country, as his father-in-law had done with steel rails, and he wielded his shovel before an interested throng just south of Ashland, as the accompanying picture indicates.

The shoveling was to initiate the southern section of highway 99, — the Pacific highway and was to be done with revenues from a $500,000 bond issue voted by Jackson county citizens to "start at the California line and go as far north as the money would go." The work was to be done by the county authorities with the guidance of Major H. L. Bowley, the first state highway engineer in the "before commission" era prior to the creation of the present appointive commission by the 1917 legislature.

Jackson County Leads Off

Jackson county was the first to take advantage of the power to vote county highway bonds granted by the 1910 amendment to the state constitution. The Pacific highway, running from Portland to Ashland and the California boundary a short distance south, had been put on the state highway map by Major Bowley and the original commission comprised of the governor, secretary of state and state treasurer.

Jackson county had started to survey the route of the Skiyow section from the California line in July 1913 and voted its bonds in September. Sam Hill's shovel wielding was to celebrate the start of construction in January 1914.

The first pavement was laid in 1915. It consisted of 1 1/4 miles of concrete laid 8 feet wide by 6 inches thick beginning at a point about 9 miles north of the California line and extending northward.

The first section to be improved extended 14 miles northward from a juncture with the California highway to the intersection of the Green Mountain road leading to Klamath Falls. It followed, in the main, the old stage and freight route between California and Jacksonville. It had six percent grades part of the way and was generously sprinkled with curves from which the motorist could look deep

Dad At Play Kills Son With "Unloaded" Pistol

CLEVELAND — (AP) — A young father playing cowboy with his two-year-old son killed the boy Monday night with a borrowed pistol which he believed was unloaded.

The victim was Dale Ferry, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Dominic Ferry. The bullet from the .45 calibre automatic ripped through the boy's chest and slightly wounded Mrs. Ferry, 23, in the side.

Ferry, a 28-year-old truck boy with the boy after they watched a western film on television.

The boy kept pointing a toy pistol at his father and so Ferry grabbed a pistol he had borrowed from his brother and took out the clip. Forgetting to check for a bullet in the chamber, he pulled the trigger.
