Yule Bonus Can't Be Cut Without Union's Consent

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The National Labor Relations board has ruled that where a Christmas bonus has been paid regularly, an employer may not reduce it without taking the matter up with the union.

"The Christmas spirit... does not dissenting in the 3-1 decision, contended 'a genuine Christmas gift has no place on the bargaining table.' But the majority held that."

Specifically, the NLRB upheld a stop short of the bargaining table, for bargaining in good faith is in itself a continuing effort to achieve goodwill between an employer and his employees."

Specifically, the NLRB upheld a complaint by a local of the CIO United Auto Workers against the Niles-Hemont-Pont Co. of west Hartford, Conn. In cutting bonuses, the firm said it did so because it had increased pension fund payments. The NLRB majority held that since the company had made varying Christmas bonus payments to its workers for a dozen years, the bonus was really a part of the workers' wages and so was subject to bargaining.
