

Douglas Phases Of Polio Status Talked At Meet

Speaking from personal experience, the Rev. Frank Drew, of Dilard, said Wednesday there's one thing the polio victim should watch out for: "That's the idea of giving up," he explained.

Rev. Drew spoke briefly Wednesday night at the annual dinner meeting of the Douglas county chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

Rev. Mr. Drew, who has been recovering from a polio attack, said he is now able to carry on much as before.

"It's awfully easy for the polio victim to quit," he commented. "I've watched several, two in this county in particular. One, although he really should know he won't be able to sit up, still says he's going to get well."

"The other, who I've seen walk the length of a corridor with braces sits in his wheel chair and says, 'I can't.'"

Financial Status Talked

Also speaking was Gene Malecki, Oregon representative of the national foundation.

He said 50 percent of each dollar donated to polio drives remains locally. The remainder is used for research, professional services, aid to local chapters and other necessary items.

"For the first time in history," he said, "Oregon chapters are dependent on national epidemic aid funds." He explained that Oregon has been able to take care of its own polio fighting finances previously.

Bob McCarl, local director and head of the Roseburg drive, said the January fund drive goal this time will be one-third greater.

Dr. E. J. Wainscott, county health officer, said Douglas county has had six polio cases so far this year, and $8,000 has been spent fighting those and several carryovers from 1950.

Reproof May Pay Off

Del McKay, who is handling high school drives, said the high school students present more of a problem than graded school youngsters.

McKay added he may have found a solution to the problem—the insult.

"Last year I had a heart-to-heart talk with all 1,100 of them and told them I was sick and tired of seeing their little brothers and sisters turn in more money than they did."

Also speaking Wednesday were R. J. Bashford, chairman of the local executive committee; Franklyn Voyt, treasurer, and A. G. Henninger, member.

Membership Drive Of C. Of C. Breaks Records

Campaign team captains and members have broken all records in calls and sales made in the current Roseburg chamber of commerce membership campaign, the committee's report shows.

Despite this record, 93 good prospects remain to be called on, and 100 percent coverage is the committee's aim.

"Our community and personal stakes in the many critical problems which have to be solved with chamber of commerce leadership are too important to stop now," states Chairman Horace C. Berg in a letter being mailed out to chamber members. "All firms and individuals are a part of this 'community family.' The chamber's full time work schedule is a family job, one which, when completed, will benefit all firms and individuals of this community's family. Everyone should carry his membership share in this great community family project."

Tabulation shows 11 teams have taken 281 prospects, actually talked to 175 and made 92 membership sales, with 15 additional who have positively indicated they will join, 10 who may join and eight undecided. Twenty-four gave miscellaneous negative replies, none of which indicated a negative attitude against the value and importance of membership, and only 26 gave a positive "no," said Berg.

Actual sales of 92 and the "will join" of 15 total 107 out of 175 calls, or 61 percent. On this basis the remaining 93 prospects should net 57 new members Berg points out.

"It is difficult to ask for more help in view of the outstanding records already made, a large part of which has been contributed by the team members who have yet to make a few additional calls," said Berg. "But the reasons are so compelling that each of us must 'Actual sales of 92 and the 'will based on honesty and the essential conditions demanded by the Catholic church," he said.

"These include church marriages, religious education in the schools and a free Catholic press. Church marriage must be defended to the last breath, for it is a sacrament established by the good Lord and man has no right to change it."

The 53-year-old high churchman indicated he is willing to live the rest of his life as a simple parish priest in the church where he was baptized soon after his birth to a Croatian peasant family in the Krasic parish. The 400-year-old church dominates the village of peasant homes and farm buildings.

Under terms of his release, the archbishop is forbidden to issue pastoral letters, advising his followers on public or personal conduct, or to issue public statements. He may leave Krasic only with the permission of the Croatian minister of interior.

But he will be permitted to preach sermons in church and it is believed he will be completely free to receive any visitors.

He was brought from prison in a new American automobile presented to him, through the Vatican, by U. S. admirers.

Grand Champion Turkey Selected At Show Today

Only the top birds from Oregon flocks remain in the running today at the Northwestern Turkey show being held at the Douglas county fairgrounds.

Two days of careful judging have reduced the number eligible for the grand championship in the live division to four. They were pitted against each other for the best-bird title today at 1 p.m.

In yesterday's judging, a 23-pound turkey entered by Dave Cooper, Parkdale, Ore., captured grand championship honors in the old hen dressed division.

Gath brothers, Turner, Ore., entered a 35-pound young tom which was awarded the reserve championship in the dressed class. They displayed the largest bird in the division—a huge, 45½-pound old tom.

Largest Number Entered

Cooper had the largest individual entry with 34 birds.

At 9 this morning, special classes and the championship breeder display were judged. But the feature of the show was the selection of the grand champion bird.

This afternoon the dressed birds will be disposed of through an auction, with receipts going to the owners.

Tonight at 7, the exhibition will officially end with the annual turkey show banquet and dance in the K of P hall. Friday morning the birds will be released.

Errors In Report Of Storm-Struck Home Corrected

She wasn't home at the time her roof blew off, and besides her name isn't Shoemaker. Mrs. Bill Showalter informed the News-Review.

Mrs. Showalter was referring to a cutline under the picture of her damaged home appearing in Tuesday's heavy windstorm about 12:30 p.m. at the Veterans hospital. She was notified of what had happened by a neighbor.

Canvas from an outfitting house hurriedly was nailed over the exposed upper story, and neighbors, friends and co-workers from the Veterans hospital assisted her in removing or sheltering furnishings.

The house was not damaged except for the roof, which seemed to lift up and land in her front yard, said Mrs. Showalter. There was scarcely any water damage, except a little in the upper story, from the rain. Not even windows were broken.

Workmen Wednesday began putting on a new roof.

Mrs. Showalter's husband is presently in Japan.

Unreported Polio Cases Forfeit Aid

Polio cases which have not been reported to either the Douglas county or state health departments can not be paid for by the county chapter for infantile paralysis.

The chapter issued this warning to physicians and to parents of persons afflicted with the disease.

It is highly imperative, said Dr. E. J. Wainscott, county health officer, that all cases be reported in order that a full record will be on hand in the chapter's files.

He said that no case which has been properly reported will be denied financial aid by the chapter, but that responsibility can not be taken where no records exist. This is in accordance with the national foundation's policy, Dr. Wainscott said.

The Douglas county chapter has never turned down a case. It will pay every cent of cost, when necessary, and is desirous of helping every polio victim; but it cannot pay for cases that are not a matter of record, Dr. Wainscott stressed.
