$20,000 Safeway Robbery Charge Jails 2 Suspects
SEATTLE — (AP) — Two men charged with the $20,000 robbery of a Safeway store manager in nearby Burien were in jail here and in Portland today.
 King county Detective Chief A. W. Lyskoski said the first man Melville Miller, 23, has been in the county jail since the day after the robbery, Nov. 17, but the arrest was not disclosed until Lewis Wilson, 22, was picked up at Portland Thursday night.
 Lyskoski said first degree robbery charges have been filed against both men and bail has been set at $3,000 each.
 The detective chief said Wilson was arrested in a telephone booth as he tried to place a call from Portland. Portland detectives had been watching a line of public telephones in a building there for more than 24 hours, Lyskoski said.
 Both men denied knowledge of the holdup. Wilson has waived extradition, the detective said.

DECLINE IN FOOD PRICES PREVALENT IN MANY PLACES
 By SAM DAWSON
NEW YORK — (AP) — The weather is coming to the aid of the housewife where it helps — in the grocery store.
 "First benefit she's likely to see will be cheaper eggs. But the food industry says that pork is getting cheaper and predicts that poultry is heading in the same direction. And a long-distance glimmering hope is that the record cattle population will move to market in greater volume as the weather-tightened supply of feed tempts farmers to sell stock.
 In the case of eggs it's the unusually mild weather. Poultry raisers say that has fooled the hens into keeping right on laying eggs. Prices on the wholesale markets broke sharply under the big supply.
 On the Chicago mercantile exchange prices broke three to seven cents a dozen Monday, the sharp break this year. In New York wholesale prices are 12 to 13 cents below a week ago.
Hog Marketing Increases
 In the case of pork, it's part weather that is sending hogs to market in greater volume than since 1944. In many parts of the hog-growing regions feed conditions aren't too good. Bad weather last summer accounts for wet corn. That won't hold over the winter. So, farmers fattened hogs quickly and decided not to buy feed for them later on when their own wet corn is gone.
 In the southwest cattle country, it wasn't too much moisture, it was too little. Many of the Southwest's ranges are short of grass this winter. That means that more of the nation's big cattle population must be fed on grain. That's expensive and means higher costs of producing beef. But it also could mean that some farmers and feeders will move cattle to market earlier.
Livestock Crop Boosted
 The nation's livestock population is around 180 million, government officials estimate. This is four million more than a year ago. A greater portion of cattle than usual is being held off the market this fall — partly to build up breeding stock, but partly in expectations of high prices next year.
 Those being held for higher prices, however, may run into the feed shortage which some predict. Feed prices are already going up. For example, soybean meal sold at $63 a ton in August and now brings $74 a ton. Some stock feeders are turning to Canada's frost-bitten wheat for their animals. The weather-nipped wheat sells for 16 cents a bushel less than domestic wheat.
Poultry Prices May Drop
 Poultry prices may come down, some in the food industry are predicting, because of the high supplies on hand. Warehouse holdings of chicken, and also frozen chicken stocks, are a fourth higher than a year ago. Wholesale prices already are weakening.
 Sugar prices are shaky, too, according to the industry. Raw sugar now sells in New York at $85 a hundred pounds, against $65 two weeks ago. The world supply of sugar is large, and U. S. consumption this year fell well below last year's heavy demand.

Decline In Food Prices Prevalent In Many Places

WASHINGTON — (AP) — A new method of artificial respiration is due to get widespread use soon in the United States.
 It is the "push-pull" system, already well known in Europe and said to get about twice as much air into and out of the lungs as does the Schafer "prayer-prayer" method now in standard use in the United States.
 The "push-pull" system is officially known as the Holger Nelson method. It has been recommended by the national research council. The Defense department said it will soon be taught to the armed services. The U. S. public health service, bureau of mines, Boy and Girl Scouts and YMCA's are among other agencies that will use it as soon as sufficient instructors are available.
 In the "push-pull" system, the operator kneels with the victim needing resuscitation lying face down with his head between the operator's knees. The victim's arms are folded, with the hands under the face. The operator presses on the victim's ribs, evacuating the lungs. Then he lifts and pulls the victim's folded arms upward and forward the operator, who sways backward, grasping the victim's arms above the elbows. That expands the chest, drawing air in, and completes a resuscitation cycle the operator tries to get through once every five seconds.

TIMBER FIRE LOSS ENOUGH TO BUILD 100,000 HOUSES
WASHINGTON — (AP) — About one billion board feet of federal forest service timber, enough to build nearly 100,000 houses, went up in smoke this year.
 The forest service estimated that 9,938 fires burned over 392,123 acres of timber and livestock range and destroyed at least $28,000,000 worth of resources on federal land alone.
 M. M. Nelson, assistant chief of the forest service fire control division, told a reporter that 1951 was "one of the worst years in the past few decades, from a loss standpoint."
 Millions of dollars could be added to the loss total as a result of fires on state and private land, for which estimates are unavailable.
 Droughts in the Far West and Southwest made it easy for flames to whip through valuable timber stands, and kept about 10,000 fire fighters busy battling blazes.
 The number of fires this year—9,938—is not unusually large. There were 9,219 last year and an average of 9,866 in the preceding four years. This year's burned acreage, however, is considerably larger than the 319,403 last year and 219,121 averaged in 1946-50.
 The 26,000,000 billion-board foot loss is much greater than during any other recent year. The loss in 1950 was $6,500,000 and 115,000,000 board feet. The average in 1946-50 was $4,000,000 and 106, feet.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — About one billion board feet of federal forest service timber, enough to build nearly 100,000 houses, went up in smoke this year.
 The forest service estimated that 9,938 fires burned over 392,123 acres of timber and livestock range and destroyed at least $28,000,000 worth of resources on federal land alone.
 M. M. Nelson, assistant chief of the forest service fire control division, told a reporter that 1951 was "one of the worst years in the past few decades, from a loss standpoint."
 Millions of dollars could be added to the loss total as a result of fires on state and private land, for which estimates are unavailable.
 Droughts in the Far West and Southwest made it easy for flames to whip through valuable timber stands, and kept about 10,000 fire fighters busy battling blazes.
 The number of fires this year—9,938—is not unusually large. There were 9,219 last year and an average of 9,866 in the preceding four years. This year's burned acreage, however, is considerably larger than the 319,403 last year and 219,121 averaged in 1946-50.
 The 26,000,000 billion-board foot loss is much greater than during any other recent year. The loss in 1950 was $6,500,000 and 115,000,000 board feet. The average in 1946-50 was $4,000,000 and 106, feet.
