Recall Of Gen. MacArthur Justified By Senate Probe Findings, Morse Declares

PORTLAND—(AP)—Senator Wayne Morse said here a restudy of the MacArthur controversy of last spring leads to but one conclusion: "It is the duty of the President to recall General MacArthur." The senator told the City club that he had restudied the issue because he found it still alive in Oregon. It has prompted more questions, he said, than any other issue since he has returned home from Washington.

Morse called himself a "critic of the administration policy and of the inexcusable mistakes made in Asia," but said the study led him to the same conclusion he reached at the time of the MacArthur hearings in Washington last spring. He listed, point by point, the case against MacArthur, and urged his listeners to read the report he wrote, as a member of the senate hearing committee, after the MacArthur hearings. His principal points: "1. At no time did the joint chiefs of staff, individually or as a group, agree to approve of the MacArthur program for expansion of war in Asia. "2. On last Jan. 12, the joint chiefs of staff sent to MacArthur a tentative study, which was prepared for the national security council, with 16 points for action in case it became necessary to evacuate Korea or fall back to a beachhead around Pusan... the basis for MacArthur's apparent assumption that the joint chiefs of staff agreed with him was that among the 16 points... were suggestions for bombing the enemy even beyond Korea if necessary to protect our troops in such a defensive maneuver... this did not contemplate suggestions for expansion of the war contrary to the then known UN policy into the mainland of China.

Peril In Blockade Plan "3. General Collins (army chief of staff) testified that on Jan. 15 he read to MacArthur the tentative proposals, and explained the purpose was to set forth policy in defensive action... he made clear again, as the joint chiefs of staff had done repeatedly, that the foreign policy of the U. S. and U. N. in Asia was in opposition to expansion of the war into the mainland of China. "4. MacArthur's proposal for a blockade by the U. S., acting unilaterally, of the ports of China and of Port Arthur and Darien... would have left Russia with no other course but to break the blockade, and you break blockades with guns and submarines, and the war would be on. "5. Evidence shows that MacArthur knew, before he issued his March 24 ultimatum to the enemy to negotiate a truce in the field, that the President was in negotiations on proposed terms of a truce... this act on the part of MacArthur so embarrassed our government that it became necessary for the President to withdraw from negotiations at that time because of protest of our Allies... this act alone would have justified his withdrawal with no other course. "6. The joint chiefs of staff advised MacArthur against using a large number of non-Korean troops in the area of the Yalu border... nevertheless MacArthur drove to the north and ran head-on into Communist forces so strong, of which MacArthur was unaware, as to force our American forces into what some military men have told me was our greatest military defeat in history. "7. Morse added that he believes the "procedure in the recall of MacArthur was inexcusable." He said he thought MacArthur should have been called back to Washington, and an honest attempt made to iron out differences. "Failing in that, MacArthur should have been given a chance to resign, and a joint statement issued setting forth the differences of opinion," Morse said. The Cabinet Room at No. 10 Downing Street is equipped with double doors and the windows have double sashes to balk would-be listeners

Dist. Atty. Davis Slated To Discuss Juvenile Problem

District Attorney Robert G. Davis will discuss the county's "critical" juvenile delinquency problem next Saturday on KRNR's "This Town Is Yours" interview at 6:15 p.m. It will be a return appearance on the program for the district attorney. KRNR interviewer Bob Grant asked him back after a brief discussion of the problem on last Saturday's program. Davis said Saturday he considered the juvenile delinquency problem both "serious and critical" at the present time. "In the last year there has been a decided increase," Davis said. "Somebody has to find the answer in a very short time." During the interview, Davis also discussed his job as district attorney and work on the county's traffic safety committee. The safety campaign, he said, will be carried to high schools and civic groups throughout the county, starting again this week after a brief interlude when members were tied up with other work.
