Local Jewelry Store Appointed Gem Testing Lab

American Gem society of the United States and Canada has announced the appointment of Knudtson's jewelers in Roseburg as a regular society gem testing laboratory.

These labs, of which there are about 15 in the U. S. at the present time, are selected jewelers whose gemological training and experience and equipment qualify them for appointment as gem identification laboratories. To qualify, a jeweler must have in the regular employ, a certified gemologist of the American Gem society and have the required gemological testing instruments.

The labs are set up as gem testing service for the jewelry profession and for the general public. Other American Gem society testing labs are in major cities of the U. S.

The lab is under the direction of Alvin M. Knudtson of Knudtson's jewelers. Registered jeweler of the society since 1934, Mr. Knudtson has been a certified gemologist since 1936. At the time Knudtson became certified gemologist, there were fewer than 20 gemologists in the country. Now certified gemologists in the U. S. number over 100 with over 1,000 jewelers holding registered jeweler titles, and many more as members of the society who are not directly connected with the jewelry industry.

The American Gem society of the United States and Canada is a non-profit professional society made up of jewelers, scientists and educators whose business or profession is related to the study of gemology, pledged to the "vigilant" protection of the jewelry buying public and advancement in the study of gemology. Headquarters of the society are in Los Angeles and New York city, said Al Knudtson, junior partner in the business.

There are hundreds of species of gems. In every color, there are from five to 25 gems which may easily be confused with each other. Many gems or gem substitutes of different kinds can be placed side by side and all appear similar, Knudtson said.

The Graf Zeppelin left Germany, Oct. 11, 1928, and arrived at Lakehurst, N. J., Oct. 15, having flown 6,630 miles in 4 days, 15 hours, 46 minutes.

In 1949 New York and Texas were the only states in the United States that had more than 500 hospitals each.
