Roast Christmas Turkey Slowly
 By GAYNOR MADDOX
 NEA Food and Markets Editor
 For best results, roast your turkey slowly. That is the exclusive advice in this column from Mabel Stegner. Born in South Dakota, now a well-known home economics consultant, Miss Stegner has more practical hints for roasting the Christmas turkey.
 She thinks today's turkeys, bred and grown under scientific conditions, are much superior to the big 18 to 20-pound birds she remembers at home. The small Beltsville turkeys, weighing 6 to 8 pounds, now available, are a blessing for small families. She believes in low temperature roasting, 300 degrees F. for large turkeys, 325 degrees F. for small ones, rather than the old-fashioned high temperatures. Most people cook their turkeys far too long," she insists. "Two hours is plenty for small turkeys and 3 hours for medium-sized ones. Naturally the turkey browns more slowly when roasted at a low temperature, but I help it along with my own pet browning glaze made by blending 1 cup softened fat with 1 tablespoon kitchen bouquet."

 "Sometimes I add a bit of herb seasoning to it for an unusual touch. I rub this mixture all over the turkey before cooking. The fat melts as the turkey cooks and keeps the skin moist and soft."
 Here is Miss Stegner's recipe for lumpy giblet gravy:
Makes 4 cups gravy
(Makes 4 cups gravy)
 One quart water, turkey giblets and neck, 1/2 cup flour, 1 cup cold water, 2 teaspoons salt, 2 teaspoons kitchen bouquet.
 Bring water to boil and add giblets and neck. Let cook slowly until tender, about 40 minutes. Drain off broth and add water to make 3 cups if necessary. Mince giblets and meat from neck and add to broth. Combine flour, cold water and salt by shaking in a tightly closed jar.
 Add gradually to broth and cook, stirring constantly, until gravy thickens and boils. Add kitchen bouquet. Drain fat from roasting pan and return 1/2 cup to pan. Pour hot giblet gravy into roasting pan and stir until brown drippings are taken up.
