gill netters' bill to run the traps out of the river. Now the trap operators are sponsoring an initiative to close the river to all fishing during hours of darkness. Since a lot of the best fishing is at night, this one really would fix the gill netters. Some of the state's barbers, wanting a five-day week, are behind an initiative to make barber shops close up on Mondays. Incidentally, there is a law to prevent operation of barber shops on Sundays. This is the only law we can find that prevents any kind of business from being open Sundays.

UMPQUA

The Umpqua School collected $25 that is waiting to be picked up by an official for the March of Dimes. A group of neighbors gathered at the LaVerne Murphy home on Friday evening to help little Deanie Farrow celebrate his first birthday. His mother, Mrs. Walter Farrow, who has been visiting with the LaVerne and the Delmar Murphy families for the past two weeks, expects to visit with friends in California before returning to her home in Sauk Center, Minn. Mrs. Farrow is remembered as Gerda Miller by those who knew her when she lived at Umpqua and worked in Roseburg. Joe Brant was seriously injured in an auto accident that sent him to a hospital in Eugene. Joe lived here until last year, and his mother still resides here.

Eighteen Initiative Issues Already Bound For Oregon Ballot In Addition To Twelve Measures Of Legislature

By PAUL W. HARVEY JR. SALEM (AP) — Oregon's most explosive issues of recent years — milk control, liquor, old age pensions, daylight saving time and fish traps — are coming to the front again. These issues are up before the people in the eight initiative measures that are being circulated for signatures. Each initiative needs only 26,296 signatures to get on the November ballot, which probably will be the most measure-crowded ballot in 25 years. Twelve legislative acts will be on the ballot. The eight initiatives might be joined by others, because there's still plenty of time to file initiatives and get them signed up. The deadline for getting signatures is July 3. These laws let the Public Welfare Commission file prior claims against estates of deceased pensioners, and make relatives who are financially able contribute to the support of the aged. These pension groups detest both laws. Consumers groups in Portland and other cities, having failed in the 1951 Legislature, will carry their milk control fight to the people. Their initiative would abolish milk control. Oregon's Anti-Liquor League will provide the liquor battle, their initiative calling for prohibition. An initiative to prevent daylight saving time is being circulated by the Oregon Farmers Union, with the support of the state Grange, only by proclamation of the Governor. He did proclaim it last summer, and the Grange failed to stop it in a long court battle. The bonus issue will come up again. At the 1950 general election, the people voted a maximum $500 bonus for Oregon's World War II veterans. The new initiative would repeal it, but the bonus might be paid before the election. Another fish fight is in prospect, this one being the old quarrel between the gill netters and fish trap operators on the Columbia River. The people voted in 1948 for the
