Air Pocket Saves Dog Under Submerged Boat

PORTLAND — Five Portlanders were rescued from the Willamette River after their boat capsized in the wash of an ocean-going freighter Saturday.
 Nearby fishermen in small boats pulled members of the P. J. Torney family to safety. Barbara Chaney, 21, still was missing, however. Torney dove back toward the boat, floating upside down. He broke out a cabin window, and pulled Miss Chaney to safety.
 The Torneys were disoriented over the fact that their dog, who had been with them 14 years, could not be found.
 It was 45 minutes later, when the boat was being towed to shore, still upside down, that they thought they heard a scratching noise inside the boat. Another window was broken out, and out came the dog, wet but lively. An air pocket inside the submerged boat apparently saved the animal.

 during the summer than during the time school is in session."
 A—Haystead: "If it's a clear, sunny day the youngsters will take off and there's more likelihood of trouble than on a bad day. In checking through the police files, I found that 92 per cent of one of officer's arrests of juveniles involved the use of automobiles."
 Q—"Should youngsters be banned from bringing their cars to school?"
 A—Tumbleton: "That's a question that should be referred to the students. If a problem is laid out before them, chances are they'll come out with a better answer than you would give."
 Q—"Should the schools offer their facilities for recreation programs?"
 A—Dahlen: "I feel that the school facilities should be made available as much as possible to city recreational programs at a very minimum of cost."
 A—Tumbleton: "From the standpoint of a school administration it's a case of 'let's not make our budget any higher than we have to, and let's make the dollars show as much as possible.'"
 Dan Dimick, secretary of the Dads Club, queried, "Would it be fair to say, in the light of comments on money, that delinquency takes place in the budget?"
 A—Tumbleton: "It's a question of which are people considering more important—dollars or youngsters?"
 Q—"Is there more juvenile delinquency now than there was five years ago?"
 A—Haystead: "It has intensified. Five years ago a lot of juvenile trouble was taken care of by the parents. Now it's referred to state agencies or to police departments. Many people simply turn their youngsters over and say, 'here they are; I can't do anything with them.'"
