Big "Cat" Diesel Cuts Up At Glide

Glide Lumber Co.'s sawmill at Glide, Oregon is just as smooth-running as its name. The 100 h.p. planer above, and the 150 h.p. headsaw, 100 h.p. edger, plus the resaw, water pump, rolls, conveyor and blower motors are all powered by a "Caterpillar" D 397 Diesel electric set two eight hour shifts daily. The V-12 500 h.p. blower-type "Cat" was installed by Interstate Tractor and Equipment Co. Cuts 50% per shift. Insert: J. S. and Gordon Evans, co-owners, with Harold Powell and Jim Martin.

U Can top all production records with "Caterpillar's" bulldozer innovation, the "8-U". Berke Bros., Portland contractor, did in building this forest access road at Zig Zag, Oregon near scenic Mt. Hood. Two end sections of the heavy-duty blade (right) angle forward at 25 degrees to give it a flat U-shape. "End spillage is reduced and capacity is greatly increased, allowing you to drift bigger loads greater distances," says Manager Joe Chamberlain of Interstate Tractor who distributes the new blade.

ROLLER-COATER machine at Interstate Tractor's shop at Roseburg adds hundreds of hours of new life to "Caterpillar" track rollers previously consigned to scrap pile. The submerged arc-welder builds up wearing surfaces to new specifications in record time and at low cost.

MOBILE is the word for Skagit "S-1-B" versatile new logging unit. (Left) The S-1-B moves itself into scattered timber stands, rigs its collapsible spar through powered guylines and high-leads to the landing. With a loading tong, the S-1-B then haul-booms loads the logs with a 180 degree swing, then picks up its jacks and moves again. Interstate Tractor's Skagit Distributor at Roseburg.

WILBUR "MIKE" LINDGREN, parts manager at Interstate Tractor for several years, has been advanced to field territory manager.

WALT HOBBS, veteran Interstate parts man just released from Navy recall, has moved to Roseburg from Salem to manage parts department here.

SERVICE is the key-word at Interstate Tractor, "Caterpillar" headquarters at 709 North Jackson in Roseburg. Your ring at 3-6621 sends 36 employees into action.
