New Drawings For Farms Will Be Open To Vets

War veterans are given priority in acquiring 32 farm units in the Columbia basin irrigation project, Washington, and 27 farms on the Yuma Mesa division of the Gila reclamation project in southwestern Arizona. It was announced by the Oregon Department of Veterans' Affairs.

Applications for the Columbia basin drawing must be filed by May 15 with the Bureau of Reclamation, Ephrata, Washington. Filing deadline for the Gila project farm is May 20, in the reclamation bureau's office at Yuma, Arizona.

Application blanks may be obtained either by writing the Ephrata or Yuma reclamation offices, or from the Oregon veterans department, State Library Building, Salem, and State office Building, Portland.

The Columbia basin farms range in size from 48 to 153 irrigable acres and are priced from $1091 to $7300. They are located 6 to 15 miles south of Othello in central Washington.

The current offering is the fourth and final one to be released in 1952 in the Columbia basin. It makes a total of 121 farms opened to public entry this year in the big central Washington irrigation project fed by waters from Grand Coulee dam.

Preference in applying goes to veterans of World War II only. The applicant must have had two years of farming experience and must have 4500 in cash, assets or farming equipment.

The Gila farms are offered as homesteads, without cash. The applicant must have $8000 in cash or assets, however. Priority extends to veterans of World Wars I and II, the Spanish-American war and the Philippine insurrection.
